

TOLERANCE UNDERSTANDING COEXISTENCE

OMAN'S MESSAGE OF ISLAM

“It is good that this exhibition can highlight the vital importance of religious freedom in a world where such freedom is so often not respected.

“It is also good that the positive resources of the Ibadhi school of Islam and the tolerant traditions of the Sultanate of Oman in particular are given more prominence. I trust that the exhibition will provide a space in which mutual sharing and learning can take place.”

Excerpt from the message of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Revd. Rowan Williams, to the audience at St. Philip's Centre in Leicester, 16 July 2012.

“The exhibition comes at a very important time, as violence and extremism prevail throughout the world, confirming the need for tolerance, understanding and coexistence.”

HE Dr. George Vella, the Foreign Minister of Malta, on the occasion of the inauguration of the exhibition in Valetta, 24 October 2014.

“It is especially timely that this exhibition has now arrived at the United Nations Headquarters in New York. (...) Let us all focus on what unites us, and work together to defend equality and dignity for everyone, everywhere.”

Under-Secretary-General Maria Luiza Viotti, UN Chef de Cabinet on the occasion of the inauguration of the exhibition at UN Headquarters in New York, 15 April 2019.

Background: Concept and Evolution

The Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in Oman, in cooperation with Arabia Felix Synform GmbH in Munich, conceived the idea to produce an exhibition about the religious life in the Sultanate of Oman, entitled "Religious Tolerance: Islam in Oman," a project of the Ministry to promote interfaith dialogue, with special emphasis on religious tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence.

The original exhibition consisted of 20 information panels, replicas of historic documents and a 30-minute documentary film entitled "Religious Tolerance in Oman." The materials were supplied free of charge to the host institutions. The hosts provided the display space and security, took care of any costs for promotion and advertising, and were responsible for the opening ceremony.

A website (www.islam-in-oman.com) was created to make the contents of the exhibition available online so that potential hosts of the exhibition could view the displays and inform themselves on the details how to go about hosting the exhibition.

The first showings of the exhibition (Project Stage I: 10 Exhibitions in Germany and Austria, April 2010 through July 2011) took place at adult education establishments, the "Volkshochschulen," thus making it well-placed and highly visible, and thereby attracting media attention and widespread public acceptance. It was very well-received and attended, even generating interest to have the exhibition hosted by institutions located outside of Germany and the German-speaking regions.

Opening of the exhibition at Valetta, Malta

Therefore a decision was taken in 2011 to have the exhibition translated into seven more languages and made available elsewhere in Europe. Arabia Felix Synform GmbH in Munich was commissioned to prepare and arrange an additional 30 exhibitions (Project Stage II: 30 Exhibitions in Europe, July 2011 through March 2015).

As word of this timely message spread in academic and interfaith circles, the project was extended again in 2013 with the new title "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam." It was translated into numerous languages and offered worldwide to carefully chosen institutions involved in interfaith dialogue (Project Stage III: 40 Exhibitions worldwide, April 2013 through September 2016 and Project Phase IV: 15 Exhibitions worldwide, beginning May 2016).

The number of informative panels rose to 24, and in 2015 multimedia display monitors were added. In parallel the content of the website www.islam-in-oman.com was extended and translated into 18 languages. During this time, the panels were translated into 27 languages, and the documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" into 24 languages.

Until the outbreak of the global corona pandemic and the associated forced shutdown of all exhibition activities by March 2020 the total number of exhibitions presented worldwide reached 132. Each of the exhibitions portrayed in this report was held in cooperation between the Sultanate of Oman and a local community. The directors of the educational establishments took it upon themselves to invite the mayor and/or high-ranking representatives of the community, as well as representatives of Oman, and at every exhibition opening such notables were present.

The exhibition has been hosted at a variety of institutions – adult education centres, universities, city halls, libraries, UN and UNESCO headquarters, government ministries, museums of renown – and used as a focal point in meetings, conferences, and special events, all relating to interfaith dialogue and all promoting Oman's message of religious tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence.

The success of this Omani-German venture demonstrates that constructive cooperation between East and West is, contrary to widespread opinion, quite possible even today. This is due mainly to the objective presentation of the content, free of commercial interests, which conveys cogent information about a modern Arab society, helps raise awareness and reduce misunderstandings about Islam, contributes to a public dialogue, and substantiates the positive image of the Sultanate of Oman.

The Exhibition

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance - Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" consists of printed matter, 3D objects and digital media. The heart of the exhibition consists of 24 full-color information panels, size 70 x 100 cm. Facsimile prints of ancient manuscripts and artifacts, like camel shoulder blades emblazoned with Quranic writings, enrich the setting. Shadow art, calligraphy and film add an artistic level to the exhibition. Multimedia terminals allow visitors to read the panels in other languages and inform themselves on various topics in more detail than presented in the exhibition.

—> see Appendix III: The Exhibits (see page 231)

Panel design

The colors of the exhibition panels were selected from pigments produced personally by Georg Popp using Omani earth and minerals. The entire color palette of the exhibition panels is therefore 100% authentic Omani. It is also unique, because this color set was digitalized and produced exclusively for the first time for use in this exhibition, and reflects the real and naturally-occurring colors of Oman.

The border ornamentation was produced using the font "Sindbad" designed by Georg Popp, derived from ornaments of Omani carved doors and door frames. The font "Sindbad" received the International Type Design Award in 1999.

Panel Contents and Texts

The concise, succinct stand-alone texts can be easily read in passing, and in any order. The corresponding pictures feature people in typical everyday religious and societal settings, which draw attention and serve to counteract stereotypes.

A special design was required for presenting these panels in semi-public buildings with lots of foot traffic: professional, aesthetically pleasing, transportable and stable, durable, and giving no impression of advertising, especially since they are displayed not in commercial spaces but in areas pertaining to higher learning, continuing education, advanced training, or intercultural dialogue.

Collateral materials

Additionally two “pop-up” banners in complimentary design are supplied with each exhibition, which contribute to the professional appearance at the exhibition entrance and/or in framing the speakers’ platform.

Each exhibitor receives posters for advertising the exhibition, and pre-printed invitation cards for the opening ceremony, which are in the same colors and design as the exhibition.

In accompaniment to the exhibition there was a catalogue for distribution to the visitors, in which the texts and pictures from the panels are found, again in the same design and colors. This brochure could be taken home, read in peace and shared with family and friends.

The Emblem of the Exhibition

The emblem of the “Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman’s message of Islam” was handpicked from among a range of artworks held in the Sultan Qaboos Grand Mosque. It represents a meeting point of diverse cultures, civilizations, and aspects of knowledge.

The Grand Mosque features design elements which have been combined from different traditions in art and architecture, such as Moroccan tiles and Mughal murals. The attractive corridors, domes, minarets, extensive gardens, and water fountains are inspired by architectural gems which are well-known in Europe and Asia. Various construction materials, including wood, marble, stained glass, ornamental stone, copper and tiles were used in making this modern masterpiece. The artworks in the courtyard of the Grand Mosque present a fantastic cultural and artistic matrix contributing to the overall impression of serenity, which duly reflects the aesthetic sensibilities of Oman.

This emblem was selected for its symbolic value as it is comprised of a variety of artistic features and colors: meticulous floral and geometric designs derived from ancient mosaics, with modern calligraphy and abstract forms. The artwork integrates Islamic and classical elements: Kufic script mingles with Mughal and Safavid decorations reflecting historical and conventional techniques, and features a systematic combination of polished and rough surfaces, in which golden mosaics contrast with embossed porcelain pieces.

With this intermingling, the emblem of the ‘Message of Islam’ Exhibition is a beautiful mosaic masterpiece and a manifestation of the beauty created by symbolically combining disparate elements representing the diversity and plurality of the world’s cultures, religions and people.

The emblem in the form of a glass sculpture was presented to UNESCO in November 2015 at an event held in conjunction with the 38th General Conference. Symbolizing the diversity of the world’s religions and cultures, as it does, and exemplifying the Sultanate’s role in establishing policies of tolerance, acceptance, and peaceful coexistence among peoples, it is now part of the permanent art collection at the UNESCO Headquarters in Paris.

The Documentary Films “Religious Tolerance in Oman” and “Islamic Art in Oman”

Produced in conjunction with the exhibition and presenting daily life in Oman in a style accessible to the general public, the film “Religious Tolerance in Oman” was deliberately created not as an intellectual or historical documentary, but by interviewing average people spontaneously on the street, completely unscripted. Presented here are scenes unlikely to be seen by a foreign visitor; the film makes normal people palpable, reducing xenophobia and enabling viewers to discover similarities among the faiths. It shows rites of various religions — Catholics, Protestants, Copts, Hindus and Muslims — as they are normally conducted, in order to depict them realistically and not through clichés (such as denouncements of Western culture). Wolfgang Ettllich, an award-winning documentary filmmaker, works professionally, extemporaneously and with curiosity.

Produced now in 24 languages, the film is very lively and has been very well received. It is shown at the exhibition openings and replayed during the exhibition. The film has proven to be popular even on its own, and is being presented in contexts other than the exhibition. More than 100.000 copies of the film have been distributed worldwide. In the Internet to date more than 200.000 people have seen the film in various languages via YouTube and the VIMEO platform. It is also available in 18 languages on the website www.islam-in-oman.com.

Together with another documentary film by Wolfgang Ettllich — “Islamic Art in Oman” — the film “Religious Tolerance in Oman” is also being offered on Oman Air’s inflight entertainment system.

Still from “Religious Tolerance in Oman”

Still from "Islamic Art in Oman"

The documentary film "Islamic Art in Oman" was produced in 3 languages: Arabic, English and German. It portrays Oman as a nation of seafarers, which has been involved in a lively exchange with other cultures for thousands of years. Through this exchange Omanis began naturally to integrate elements of other cultures into their own, without losing their own identity. Drawing on this experience, modern art is developing in Oman today its own way and in accordance with Islam.

The Sand Art Film

by Shaimah Al-Mughairy

“Arabs Got Talent” finalist Shaimah Al-Mughairy contributed to the project with a sand art performance, depicting the historic and religious development of Omani society from the times of early Islam until today.

The production itself lasted about six hours and was filmed throughout. This material was the basis for a 10-minute short film.

Due to the fact that this film works on a visual level, it is self-explanatory and needs no text. Therefore it is perfect for presentation in a loop on a big screen at exhibitions anywhere in world.

A live performance was given by Shaimah at the UNESCO Headquarters in Paris in November 2016 on the occasion of the 38th General Conference celebrating the 70th anniversary of UNESCO, and again in April 2019 on the occasion of the inauguration of the exhibition at the UN Headquarters in New York.

The Website

www.islam-in-oman.com

The website was initially launched as www.religioese-toleranz.de in January 2010 in order to give potential exhibitors a sneak preview of the exhibition, the contents of which were still subject to change. The information panels were displayed in their entirety in German. There are explanations in detail to the potential exhibitors about who the project partners are, what are their rights and obligations, the exhibition contract, and the dates of exhibitions which have taken place.

Completely unexpected, due to the deft programming, the website was quickly in third place in the search results of Google Germany using the search term "Ibadhiya." The search terms "religiöse toleranz," "oman ausstellung" (English: Oman Exhibition), or "oman islam" also delivered the website to the first page of results. It was not only potential exhibitors visiting the website, but the general public!

Expanding the exhibition in the project's Phase II, encompassing 8 languages, meant a complete restructuring of the website. Thanks to the architecture of this particular Content Management Systems (CMS) – Typo3 – it was possible to construct a multilingual, multi-domain website, adopting national top level domains as URLs leading to the localized pages. All of the alias names are linked to and lead to the parent name www.islam-in-oman.com.

Under this structure all of the content is centrally controlled in one CMS. In this way everyone who is interested can find the corresponding information in his or her mother tongue on a top-level domain (e.g. at www.tolerancia-religiosa.es for the Spanish exhibitors).

For project Stage III it became necessary to restructure the website to accommodate 18 languages, and to adapt the content, acknowledging that the website is no longer merely an information page for exhibitors, but has rather become a virtual showroom for the general public, with extended information dealing with Islam in Oman, and various topics related to interfaith dialogue. The extended website was launched in conjunction with the inauguration of the exhibition at the UNESCO headquarters in Paris at the beginning of October 2015.

With the cooperation and support of the Monotype company in Frankfurt, Germany, the latest web font technology is being used for presentation of the texts in languages which use different alphabets and writing systems, such as Arabic, Chinese, Hindi, Korean, Russian and Urdu. The website layout is therefore displayed in a consistent way regardless of the device used. Furthermore the website is automatically presented in the language pertaining to the IP address, or English by default.

The web statistics show that there is keen interest in the website by the global public. Since its inception the website has seen a steady increase in the number of monthly views and unique users. In May 2011 for the first time there were over 5000 people recorded as visiting the site. By the middle of 2014 this number had increased to an average of 25.000 visitors per month. In November 2015 for the first time the number of visitors rose to more than 70.000.

On average 250.000 pages are accessed monthly from more than 50 countries.

To optimize the findability of the website in the Internet for each of the languages, the available domain names pertaining to "religious tolerance" and "Islam in Oman" have been registered to the project "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's message of Islam." (This also protects the project from unwanted copycats and freeloaders, preventing them from choosing similar names to divert or "hijack" the search results.) Search results then point to the home page in the appropriate language.

Events and Artistic Contributions

Not all of the exhibitions have been simple matters of putting panels on display and having an opening ceremony attended by notables. We have also honored requests for the exhibition to be an integral part of an event, the focal point of a meeting, or the backdrop for a convocation of religious or business leaders.

The exhibition was the backdrop for investment forums held in both Munich and Frankfurt. Mr. Dieter Haller, Secretary of the German Foreign Office, Head of the Department of Economy and Sustainable Development, emphasized in his speech the importance of religious freedom in Oman for the safety and sustainability of economic investment in Oman, and invited the participants to take advantage of this opportunity to better inform themselves about the unique role of Islam in Oman.

On such extraordinary occasions it has fallen to the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs to ensure that the Sultanate is represented at an appropriate level, commensurate with the program planned and expenditures made by the host organization.

In collaboration with the Foreign Ministry, Oman's Ambassadors have also played a prominent role in presenting Oman in the best possible light at the highest levels, for instance at the Korea Foundation opening in Seoul.

At events with such stature, such as the ones at the UN Headquarters in New York, the UNESCO Headquarters in Paris, or during the commemoration of Rhode Island's 350 years of religious freedom, decisions were taken to provide not only the information panels, but also original paintings, sculptures, artwork, calligraphy, historical and Quranic manuscripts, and traditional Omani artifacts.

Performing Omani artists helped to enliven the proceedings at events with high levels of participation: calligraphers, religious singers, photographers, sculptors and artists.

#ActForTolerance

“Get Involved”

#ACTFORTOLERANCE is a social media initiative undertaken by the organizers of the exhibition Oman’s Message of Islam. It aims to direct attention to the project to artists worldwide. The organizers believe that there are talented people who can embody the message of tolerance by using distinctive photographs and impressive works of art.

#ACTFORTOLERANCE is intended to involve the global community in promoting tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence.

The winning artworks will be used in the global Hashtag #ACTFORTOLERANCE, all social networks, and billboards in different regions of the world, as well as selected newspapers and magazines. The one-minute video clips will be broadcast on TV and YouTube. Moreover, copies of the winning works will be provided at the exhibition Oman’s Message of Islam as it moves around the globe.

Participants are required to take into account creativity, artistic effects associated with lighting configuration, and innovative viewing angles, which can contribute to providing impressive global messages. Photographers have absolute freedom to express their creativity. Participants are welcome to depict whatever they see fit within universally applicable criteria, conditions and rules.

Types of Art:

- Photography
- Original creations of all kinds
- One-minute video clips
- Sculpture

Wherever possible, a promotion stand for the initiative is located within the exhibition space and visitors get the option of being photographed with a #ACTFORTOLERANCE board.

Visitors also receive T-shirts with the imprint #ACTFORTOLERANCE and postcards with text messages encouraging mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence, such as:

- Safety lies in the middle course
- Speak kindly to mankind!
- Wish people what you wish for yourself!
- The best people are those who are most helpful to others.
- We have made you races and tribes that you may become mutually acquainted.
- Is there any reward for good other than good?
- Return the trust to those who entrusted you!
- Do not betray even the one who betrayed you!
- Cooperate in righteousness and piety!
- Treat people with good manners!

Educational Initiatives

Originally conceived for a target audience in the German adult education establishments, the exhibition clearly and succinctly presents the visitors with basic information pertaining to Oman and Islam. This in turn has generated great interest in various other educational venues, such as universities, libraries, vocational and high schools. In some cases the exhibition materials were even incorporated into the school's official curriculum. It is indicative that in the ensuing months educational institutions comprised more than a third of the 100 exhibition venues.

This great interest has resulted in enthusiasm for the exhibition and curiosity about Oman's culture. Requests have been received for more in-depth background information for use by teachers, outlining the similarities between Christianity and Islam, and providing general information about the social conditions and developments in Oman. Such materials help make discussions in the classroom free of prejudices and previously (erroneously) held notions.

Such a study guide, comparing Islam and Christianity, was devised by the teachers of the Berufsschule V (vocational school #5) in Augsburg, Germany. It was used as a teaching aid for classes attending the exhibition in Augsburg, and subsequently adopted by seven other vocational schools in Augsburg, resulting in more than 10.000 vocational students between the ages of 17 and 23 learning of Oman's approach to peaceful coexistence, inter-religious dialogue, and the relationship of Islam and Christianity.

Beyond academia, the German Navy Chaplain Christoph Sommer — who accompanies the marines on their tours of duty off the coast of Somalia, with the mission of containing piracy — requested and received copies of the exhibition brochure and the documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" on DVD to distribute to the soldiers on board, who have regular shore leave in Salalah for rest and recuperation.

Several organizations interested in the topic of interfaith dialogue who were familiar with the exhibition took it upon themselves to go one step further and investigate the reality of inter-religious life in Oman by undertaking study tours to Oman. Each of these group tours explored the country, visited cultural and historical sites, and entered into free and open dialogue with religious leaders, regular Omani citizens, and expat locals. They include, e.g.:

- "Reinoldinum" Education Center of the protestant church in Dortmund, Germany
- Otto-Friedrich University Bamberg, Germany
- "Freunde Abrahams," an renowned interreligious association of Munich, Germany
- "Confronti," an Italian interfaith group from Rome, Italy
- Kennesaw State University, USA
- Augsburg University, Germany
- USAF Air War College, Regional Culture Studies program, USA
- Griffith University, Brisbane, Australia

Public Reception

More than 300.000 people have personally visited the exhibition at the 80 locations outside the Sultanate of Oman. It goes beyond anecdotal evidence that people who have viewed the exhibition now view Oman as a modern, open country, with a culture of tolerance and openness. That people seek out the authors for continuing discussion, to create new dialogue, to spread the word, and are taking an interest in the history and development of the Sultanate is evidence of new perceptions.

The public relations aspect of this exhibition cannot be ignored. The caliber of this exhibition and the sites and context in which it has been presented have resulted in a most positive portrayal of the Sultanate of Oman. The support offered by religious, educational and municipal institutions could not have been purchased, and was offered in a spirit of amity and mutual benefit.

One of the most impressive compliments paid to this project was the decision of the mayor of the city of Foz de Iguazu in Brazil to name a public square after the Sultanate of Oman and to build there a center for religious tolerance.

The print media, radio and tv have promoted the exhibition with sensitively written editorial content, which is persuasive and highly regarded by the public, and publicized it in the calendars of upcoming events. The exhibition has been well-received in each instance, and the perceptions of the public have been notably and demonstrably affected positively.

We have managed to collect an impressive number of media publications related to the exhibition, but this number must be considered as partial and selective, by no means comprehensive and all-inclusive. The total circulation of the newspapers and magazines from outside of Oman, which have printed articles pertaining to the exhibition, is estimated at 10 million. Additional to that are TV and radio reports that are estimated to add another 10 million.

The project partners promoted the exhibition on their websites and set a link to the website www.islam-in-oman.com. Moreover hundreds of reports in the Internet from all over the world document the various activities in the many countries in the long run and can still be seen years after the events took place.

—> See Appendix II: Media Reach (see page 171)

Also it is evident that many of the media reports from all over the world portray the Sultanate as a country where you find religious tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence. Examples given are BBC world, CNN, FORBES, Gulf News, Reuters, Bloomberg, Alhurra TV.

The impact goes beyond the print media, news coverage and website links, which provide concrete evidence of the exhibition's efficacy in promulgating Oman's message of Islam, whereas circumstantial evidence is provide by social media. The collected samples of Facebook and instagram postings, Tweets and sharing of same, show that they are the digital equivalent of word-or-mouth messaging and personal recommendations.

Growing a Network

The project is linking together more and more people supporting the idea of religious tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence. It currently involves representatives of the Catholic church, Anglican Church, Orthodox Coptic church, numerous protestant denominations, Muslim organizations, and various educational institutions, e.g. adult education centres, vocational schools, libraries and universities. A number of them have been or are actively involved in the exhibition, others have requested to be kept informed and are interested in an ongoing dialogue.

More than 1000 institutions throughout the world have been contacted so far from our side, informed about the project and invited to participate. As a result, various renowned organizations have expressed their respect for the project and actively supported and promoted it within their networks, most importantly:

The UN, which hosted the exhibition at its headquarters in New York in April 2019; UNESCO, which hosted the exhibition at its headquarters in Paris in October 2015 and September 2018; the global inter-religious organization United Religions Initiative (URI); the St. Philip's Centre in Leicester (UK), an organization under the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury; the Deutscher Volkshochschul-Verband e. V. (DVV), the biggest communal adult education network in Europe, consisting of more than 1000 local Volkshochschulen in Germany alone; and the Parliament of the World's Religions, which brings together the world's religious and spiritual communities, their leaders and their followers to a gathering where peace, diversity and sustainability are discussed and explored in the context of inter-religious understanding and cooperation.

Support and acknowledgement also was given by numerous experts in the academic and religious fields, such as:

- Prof. Dr. Marcel Olivé Elias (UNESCO Chair of Intercultural Dialogue in the Mediterranean at Universitat Rovira i Virgili, Tarragona, Spain)
- Prof. Dr. Alberto Melloni (UNESCO Chair for Religious Pluralism and Peace, Bologna University, Italy)

Political Impact

For the past several years, western media has been promulgating more often than not negative images of Islam and Arabic countries. As a result stereotypes and prejudices begin to take hold. In Spring 2011 erroneous reports about the protests in Oman were circulated in the press, conflating them with the protests of the “Arab Spring,” and they were never corrected or put into perspective. It followed that in offering this exhibition we expected and indeed experienced that some exhibitors harbored reservations about presenting it.

However, after reviewing the exhibition texts and contents (which had been published in the Internet from the very beginning to give a clear picture of the exhibition), their fears were allayed, and the political, communal and educational establishments not only showed great interest but also decided to take a stand and put the message in the public eye, thus clearly making a statement against Islamophobia and promoting the ideas of religious tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence.

Many members of the political, municipal, communal and educational establishments all over the world supported the placement of the exhibition in public spaces with high visibility, at no cost to us; they took an active role in the organizational phase, garnering support from the local community and media; and they participated personally, attending the exhibition opening and speaking publicly on its behalf. Numerous inauguration events drew the attention of the diplomatic missions of Arab states and other countries, thus raising the visibility of Oman’s initiative within the local diplomatic landscape.

With the recent influx of Middle Eastern refugees into Europe it is noteworthy that prior to that, in 2014, Germany’s Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (Bundesamt für Migration und Flüchtlinge - BAMF) approached us with the request to present the exhibition in a contemporary context for its senior staff. It was intended to counter any negative perspectives held by the staff, who are confronted daily with the problematic facets of Islam, and to prevent them from adopting prejudicial attitudes toward Muslims. In this setting a lecture was given by HE Ahmed Al-Siyabi. Dr. Schmidt, President of the BAMF, said that the exhibition helps in widening civil and cultural communications, and pointed out that there are specialists at the Ministry whose duty it is to acquaint the German people with the authentic Islam. He thanked the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs for organizing such exhibitions.

The broad reach of the exhibition into many nations around the world, with a universal message of fraternity and goodwill, endorsed at the highest levels, did not go unnoticed by the US Department of State and the White House. One of the most active members of the interfaith movement, based in Oman, is the Director of the Al Amana Centre in Muscat, Rev. Douglas Leonard, who was invited by the White House to be the keynote speaker at the President’s Interfaith Breakfast on the significant date September 11, 2015, to deliver his message of the importance of interfaith dialogue to an assemblage of 500 leaders of academic institutions in the United States. His topic was “Preventing violent extremism: Inter-religious coexistence in Oman.”

Conferences in Oman, 2014 and 2016

Conference 2014, Muscat, November 15.-19., 2014

In 2014 Oman's Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs hosted a mini-conference in Muscat to determine whether goals had been achieved, and the Ministry's international projects to date could be considered a success; to solicit feedback and suggest improvements to the projects; to make recommendations on the continuation of the projects; suggest a strategy for the future; and to determine the best allocation of resources.

The conference participants were all educators or important figures in the field of interfaith dialogue who were responsible for hosting the exhibition on religious tolerance in their respective countries. At a small ceremony following the conference, the following persons were acknowledged by the Minister, HE Sheikh Abdullah Al Salmi, for their participation and contributions:

- Rainer Basan, Director, Vocational School V, Augsburg, Germany
- Benjamin Idriz, Imam, Penzberg Germany; Founder, Munich Forum for Islam
- Alberto Melloni, UNESCO Chair for Religious Pluralism and Peace, Bologna, Italy
- Riaz Ravat, Deputy Director, St Philip's Centre, Leicester, UK
- Werner Sabisch, Managing Board, Deutscher Volkshochschulverband, Wilhelmshafen, Germany
- Amita Vohra, UNESCO
- Christiaan Vonck, Rector, Faculty for Comparative Study of Religions (FVG), Antwerp, Belgium

Conference participants visiting Sultan Qaboos Grand Mosque

The consensus achieved at the conference was that the Ministry should:

- Lay the foundation for a global network promoting peace, dialogue and mutual understanding
- Establish a central organising body which co-ordinates activities
- Identify key partners who will deliver actions
- Determine ways to measure impact and demonstrate success
- Create a website with educational materials

Suggestions were also made to improve and extend the reach of the touring exhibition, such as to simplify the exhibition materials to make them more relevant to personal experience; reconsider terminology, e.g. replace “tolerance” with “acceptance” or use other terms; make available information for students, teachers and researchers; utilize modern technologies and social media; and continue to work closely with international institutions.

As a result, the title of the exhibition was changed from “Religious Tolerance in Oman” to “Religious Tolerance, Mutual Understanding, Peaceful Coexistence: Oman’s Message of Islam;” some info panels have been added and others revised; the website was reconfigured to include a great wealth of information; multimedia touch-screen terminals were acquired; and the first steps were taken to establish a social media presence.

As to continuing to work closely with international institutions, Oman’s initiative was presented twice under the auspices of the UNESCO Headquarters in Paris, and at the Conference of the World Parliament of Religions in Salt Lake City, Utah before 10,000 people from 80 nations. Other international organizations which have collaborated are the global United Religions Initiative, the International Association for Religious Freedom, and the Aga Khan Development Network.

Conference 2016, Musannah & Muscat, 13.-17. November 2016

In keeping with the recommendations made at the 2014 Conference, and decisions taken since then by the Ministry, it is appropriate and desirable at this time to extend Oman's influence and continue to promulgate Oman's message of peace and understanding.

The recommended network, connecting influential and effective leaders in the field of interfaith dialogue, education, intercultural understanding, must be institutionalized to enable its adherents to collaborate in a coordinated fashion.

The 2016 Conference was convened to refine the strategy for growing the network, to define its mission and goals, and to begin collecting and reviewing educational materials in support of these goals. In doing so, a complementary program will be created using modern media, social networking, and event planning to ensure maximum engagement and participation.

Attending the 2016 Conference, the following persons were commended by the Minister, HE Sheikh Abdullah Al Salmi, for their participation and contributions:

- Brian Adams, Director, Centre for Interfaith & Cultural Dialogue, Griffith Univ., Brisbane, Australia
- Paolo Branca, Islamic & Arabic Studies, Università Cattolica, Milan, Italy
- Zulfikar Hirji, Prof Anthropology, York University; Director, Ismaili Centre, Toronto, Canada
- Imam Benjamin Idriz, Director, Munich Forum for Islam, Munich, Germany

Prof. Douglas Pratt, Waikato University, New Zealand

- Douglas Kindschi; Director, Kaufman Interfaith Institute; Grand Valley State Univ., Michigan, USA
- Sushma Pant, President, Nepal Chapter, International Association for Religious Freedom, Kathmandu, Nepal
- Douglas Pratt, Religious Studies, Waikato University, New Zealand
- Riaz Ravat, Deputy Director, St Philip's Centre, Leicester, UK
- Karimah Stauch, European Coordinator, United Religions Initiative, Europe; Bonn, Germany
- Amita Vohra, UNESCO Regional Programme Coordinator, Education, Beirut, Lebanon

At the conference there was a brainstorming session, in which dozens of ideas were presented and discussed. It was quickly recognized that the suggestions must be prioritized and an infrastructure created to recommend and help achieve realistic long-term goals. The first steps to be taken are to develop a sustainable network of committed individuals who are willing to give of their time and expertise; to assist in the realization of projects approved and supported by Oman; and to continue to promote interfaith dialogue and promulgate Oman's message of peace.

This network is comprised of people from a multitude of countries, from numerous faith and belief systems, and various walks of life, who have determined four initial areas in which to take action: 1) Education, grass roots, and youth; 2) Media, and public relations; 3) Academia and interfaith; and 4) Technology, technical applications, Internet.

Following the brainstorming session, teams were created to conduct workshops in these four specific areas in order to devise action plans and project proposals pertaining to these themes, with recommendations to be adopted and supported by the Ministry. The detailed report, action plans, and executive summary are in preparation to be presented to the Ministry in January 2017.

Presentation at the conference.

Personnel Involved

One of the keypoints for the success of the project is the fruitful and harmonic cooperation of the international team, led by Dr. Mohammed Al-Mamari (MARA) and Georg Popp (ARABIA FELIX), who together developed the idea and the content of the exhibition. The concept unites western and Omani perspectives, thus making the exhibition interesting for an international audience with the most varied cultural background.

Dr. Mohammed Said Al-Mamari, Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs, is director of this project.

Georg Popp, Managing Director of ARABIA FELIX Synform GmbH in Munich, Germany, has 30 years intensive involvement with the Sultanate.

OMAN'S MESSAGE OF ISLAM

Volkshochschule (VHS) Ludwigshafen

April 16, 2010 through May 14, 2010

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" and the accompanying documentary film by award-winning filmmaker Wolfgang Ettlich premiered at the Volkshochschule (adult education center) in Ludwigshafen, Germany.

Ludwigshafen is the hometown of former German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. He started his political career in the same room where the opening ceremony was held.

The exhibition opened on April 16, 2010, in the presence of Mr Said bin Yahmadi, Counselor of the Embassy of Oman in Germany; Mohamed Said Al-Mamari, of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs; and Mr Wolfgang van Vliet, Head of Department of Social Welfare and Integration of the city of Ludwigshafen.

There were approximately 200 guests in attendance, among them nearly 50 Omani students who are holders of scholarships for study at various universities in Germany. The German-Omani Association served as benefactor, covering the costs of the students' transportation and accommodations. Other notables among the guests were representatives of each of the Islamic unions and communities of the city of Ludwigshafen, who without exception praised the exhibition and the film, and lauded the initiative to undertake such an exhibition.

The exhibition was prominently displayed at the entrance area and along the main corridors of the VHS, which are heavily trafficked, making it highly visible. The exhibition in Ludwigshafen was seen by approximately 4000 people.

Audience of the opening ceremony

at the opening of the exhibition:

"... the '40 Years Renaissance' is being celebrated this year in the Sultanate of Oman. This renaissance is closely tied to the name of Sultan Qaboos. Under his leadership the Sultanate has achieved impressive development, successfully combining modernity with tradition to meet the challenges of today and tomorrow, while at the same time preserving and protecting local cultural roots.

"Oman is a modern but at the same time tradition-conscious, Islamic-oriented land of the Arabian peninsula. This exhibition gives evidence of the coexistence of diverse religious communities, the practice of Islam in daily life, and the role of women in society.

"Situated on the shores of the Indian Ocean, Oman is closely tied to the history of trade and seafaring. These traditions have left their mark: Oman is an open land, where a foreigner encounters hospitality and respect, and where tolerance is shown to other cultures and religions.

"The exhibition, which has not been seen in this format in Germany before, is the result of an initiative by the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs. It depicts the many facets of a modern Arabic society and Islam in Oman, which is tolerant towards other Islamic interpretations as well as other religions. ... "

Volkshochschule (VHS) Offenburg

June 11, 2010 through July 31, 2010

The exhibition at the VHS Offenburg was opened by Mrs Woerner, Director of the VHS; Mohamed Said Al-Mamari, Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, and Mr Georg Popp, Managing Director of Arabia Felix GmbH. Prof. Dr. Feininger of the Pedagogical College Freiburg and Dean of the Institute for Evangelical and Catholic Theology, Religious Education, gave a lecture on the theme of interreligious dialogue.

He expounded the following points:

- The necessity of interreligious dialogue based on the coexistence of peoples with diverse backgrounds and lifestyles;
- The greater context of interculturality in which the vitality of culture is evolving;
- Life needs diversity and room for development;
- The one and only God is reflected in that He approves of, promotes and values diversity;
- In contrast to some fundamentalist religious theories, which are restrictive and exclusive, God does not abhor diversity.

The exhibition was also visited by classes from 3 schools in Offenburg, with the intention of expanding the students knowledge of Islam. Each of the classes was treated to a private showing of the documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman."

Reinoldinum Dortmund

August 23, 2010 through September 16, 2010

With 580,000 inhabitants Dortmund is one of Germany's largest cities. The Reinoldinum is a modern conference and educational facility which is located in the city center and is frequented by many visitors. The institution has a close relationship with Islamic organizations in and around Dortmund, which often make use of the facilities for their own events.

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in Oman" was opened in Dortmund in the presence of Mayor Manfred Sauer; Mr Michael Westerhoff, Director of the Evangelical Education Center; and Mr Alex Moll, Director for Culture of the German-Omani Association.

At the exhibition opening Mohammed Al-Mamari, who is Advisor to the Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs, and who serves as the director of the Religious Tolerance project, explained the goals of the Omani government: "Whether Jew, Muslim, Hindu, atheist or other: we strive to maintain an active dialogue with every religious orientation."

As a result of this exhibition the Evangelical Adult Education Programm of Dortmund is now organizing a 12-day study tour to Oman in November 2011, also with the theme of religious tolerance.

Cultural Center Gasteig Munich

September 25, 2010 through October 12, 2010

With more than 1700 events per year, and nearly 6000 visitors daily, the Gasteig in Munich is one of the biggest cultural and educational centres in Europe. It is the home of Munich's Philharmonic Orchestra, the Academy of Music and Theatre, Munich's Adult Education Centre as well as the Munich Municipal Library. The exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" was displayed there in the center of the main entrance foyer, which placed it in front of practically all of the visitors.

The exhibition was opened on September 24, 2010 by Oman's Ambassador to Germany, Dr Zainab Al-Qasmiyah; the Undersecretary Sheikh Ahmad Al-Siyabi; Munich's Mayor Hep Monatzeder; the Managing Director of the Gasteig München GmbH, Mrs. von Welser; and the General Secretary of the German-Omani Association, Mr Georg Popp, who is also the exhibition's Project Coordinator in Europe. At the opening event two documentary films were also presented to the general public, "Religious Tolerance in Oman" and "Islamic Art in Oman."

Among the more than 100 invited guests were representatives of the Bavarian government and numerous other notables who are active in the promotion of intercultural and interreligious dialogue, such as Regional Bishop Susanne Breit-Kessler; Imam Benjamin Idriz, leader of the Islam Center for Europe, in Munich; Bavaria's former Vice President, Mrs Stewens; the Islamic liaison of the regional Evangelical Church, Dr. Oechslen; and the Deputy Chairman of the Foreigners Advisory Council of the city of Munich, Mr Asgar Can.

HE Ahmad Al-Siyabi in conversation with Regional Bishop Ms Breit-Kessler and Imam Benjamin Idriz

Mayor of Munich:

"... Not many of us know it, but in Oman the religions other than the state religion, Islam, are not just tolerated but are actually supported. For example, in Muscat there is a religious center where Christians, Hindus and others can practice their beliefs in their own churches and temples.

"Munich is also building bridges. Since four years there is a new Jewish center here, with a synagogue, museum, community hall, and kindergarten.

"We also know that there are approximately 100,000 Muslims living in Munich, and that Munich is a very attractive destination for tourists of the Islamic faith. There are now nonstop flights between Muscat and Munich, which means increasing numbers of Omani guests. For all these reasons the capital of Bavaria is planning a pioneering project with the name ZIE-M, which stands for the Centre for Islam in Europe, in Munich. Besides providing an equitable participation in the social, religious and cultural life of Munich, it will be an essential purpose of the ZIE-M to ensure that Islam with a European character may be recognized as a valid part of our national identity.

"This basic connection is a foundation for people of Islamic faith to find their own identity in today's Germany - indeed, throughout Europe. Additionally, we should also enable visitors of Islamic faith to be able to practice their religion in a befittingly prestigious house of worship. As you can see, there are certain parallels of religious tolerance between Munich and Oman, especially in Muscat with its houses of worship for diverse religions. It's time that we build a representative mosque here. ... "

Volkshochschule (VHS) Landkreis Hof

November 12, 2010 through November 30, 2010

Ever since the dramatic events in New York, September 2001, the Volkshochschule (VHS) of the Hof district celebrates with a festival of cultures, to promote mutual understanding among peoples from different cultural backgrounds.

The multi-day festival of 2010 with its seminars and presentations opened with the exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" and the showing of the documentary film produced by Wolfgang Ettllich, who was himself present. The opening ceremony, attended by approximately 150 guests, was attended by Dr. Fichter, Mayor of the city of Hof; Mrs Roeher, Regional Coordinator of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees; Mrs. Hoellering, Deputy Director of the VHS; with the organizer of the exhibition; Mr Georg Popp, representing the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in Muscat.

Mrs Roeher of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees had this to say about the exhibition: "I consider the exhibition and film to be very educational, and I liked them both very much. I was very pleased to see a positive side of Islam presented.... One of my colleagues was in Oman many times and found it to be just as it is presented here. I wish you great success."

Volkshochschule (VHS) Bentheim/Nordhorn

January 21, 2011 through February 18, 2011

"Giving diversity a face" was the motto of the Volkshochschule (VHS) Bentheim/Nordhorn for the first half of 2011. The exhibition "Religious Tolerance" did fit ideally into this theme.

Fortunately, in spite of the inclement weather, more than 80 guests attended the opening ceremony on the evening of January 21, 2011. Following the welcome of Mr Koop, Director of the VHS Grafschaft Bentheim-Nordhorn, Mr Georg Popp, Secretary-General of the German-Omani Association, gave a lecture on the development of Omani society in the last 40 years. Subsequently the documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" was shown.

A few days prior to the exhibition's closing, Mr Koop summed up the exhibition thusly:

"Every morning when I go to my office I am greeted by this wonderful exhibition. I'm very sad that it comes to a close this weekend. Tomorrow I have two more tours through the exhibition with classes from the high school (gymnasium). All in all the exhibition has met with great interest, especially that of the religion teachers and their classes, but also with the visitors who made of point of coming here in the course of the day. ... It was your exhibition but it was a huge win also for me."

Volkshochschule (VHS) Wilhelmshaven

Wilhelmshaven is the only port in Germany with access to the open sea. It was and is the main base for the German navy. The semester's theme of the Volkshochschule (VHS) Wilhelmshaven was "Building Bridges". The opening in Wilhelmshaven on March 3rd of the exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" was certainly in the shadow of the violent events occurring in Sohar at the end of February, which were documented in the German media and which gave the general public the impression that mass revolts would also break out in Oman.

After opening remarks by Lord Mayor Eberhard Menzel, Imam Mustafa Kaplan and Werner Sabisch, the Director of the VHS, an introductory lecture was given by Mr Georg Popp, Secretary-General of the German-Omani Association. The theme, "Oman: Sultanate between the poles of tradition and modernity" was followed by a 2-hour discussion about the (then) current situation in Oman, at the end of which everyone present went home with the realization that the circumstances in Oman are considerably different than in the rest of the Arab world.

Among the guests present were the military chaplain Christoph Sommer of the German Navy, who accompanies the marines on their tours of duty off the coast of Somalia, with the mission of containing piracy. He obtained numerous copies of the exhibition brochure and of the documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" on DVD for the soldiers on board, who have regular shore leave in Salalah for rest and recuperation.

Volkshochschule (VHS) Vienna

May 02, 2010 through May 31, 2011

On May 10, 2011 the exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in Oman" was officially opened at the Volkshochschule (VHS) Meidling in Vienna, Austria, with more than 500 visitors in attendance. Opening speeches were given by Dr. Gerhard Bisovsky, Director of the VHS Meidling, together with His Excellence Dr. Badr Al-Hinai, Ambassador of the Sultanate of Oman to Austria who also serves as Oman's envoy to the United Nations in Vienna.

In his speech the ambassador highlighted the fact that Islam was peacefully accepted in Oman during Prophet Mohammed's lifetime, and that ever since Oman has an unbroken tradition of peaceful coexistence among the religions in the country.

Subsequently a short welcoming speech was given by Dr Hilde Hawlicek, the former federal Minister for Education, Art and Culture, in the name of the Austro-Omani Association, and by Mohamed Al-Mamari on behalf of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in Muscat.

Mr Al-Mamari and Mr Georg Popp, co-directors of the project "Religious Tolerance in Oman" provided background information as to how this initiative began and what are the intentions behind it.

The evening concluded with a showing of the short documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" by Wolfgang Ettlich, who was honored by the guests with a long round of applause.

About 500 visitors joined the opening event.

Excerpt from the speech of HE Dr. Badr Al-Hinai, Ambassador of Oman to UN and Austria:

"... Oman is a country which offers a welcoming home for a number of religious institutions. Diverse religious groups thrive in the Sultanate with their distinct religious beliefs and practices.

"Also Oman is among the first countries in the Gulf region with Hindus and Buddhists temples, and the capital Muscat hosts many different Christian groups, fellowships, and assemblies, thus, becoming a melting pot of different cultures and traditions from many places across the globe.

"With such historical background in mind, and while Oman is proud of its deep rooted Arabic and Islamic heritage it plays an advocacy role in promoting ideas of moderation and tolerance. In this respect, the Sultanate is much aware of its responsibility as an active member of the international community, and therefore, has taken many practical steps and activities such as organizing many regional and international conferences for interfaith dialogue and understandings, and establishing several Sultan Qaboos Chairs, which are endowed at prestigious universities around the world with objectives to encourage the idea of a global community living in peace, harmony, mutual understanding, and freedom of religion. ..."

Otto-Friedrich-University Bamberg

June 06, 2010 through June 28, 2011

The city of Bamberg is a unique place in Germany. It is about 1000 years old and since its beginning seat of a Catholic bishop. The cathedral hosts the grave of the Pope Clemens II (pope 1046 - 1047), who was actually from Bamberg. Bamberg is an outstanding example of a central European town that has grown and evolved around a Middle Age core. Since 1993 the center of Bamberg is listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site, including more than 2400 historical buildings. The city hosts the Otto-Friedrich-Universität, which was founded in 1647 and is therefore one of the oldest in Bavaria.

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance in Oman" was presented in Bamberg in the foyer of the faculty of Geistes- und Kulturwissenschaften on the invitation by the "Center for Interreligious Studies" of University Bamberg. About 4000 students of the faculty, including students of theological paedagogic, saw the exhibition.

The opening was celebrated by Prof. Dr. van Eickels, Dean of the faculty of Geistes- und Kulturwissenschaften together with Prof. Dr. Talabardon, Managing Director of the "Center for Interreligious Studies." Following this, Prof. Dr. Franke, holding the chair for Islam Sciences, gave a detailed lecture about Ibadhiyah in Oman. The evening concluded with a report about an excursion to Oman by students of the University, done in March this year.

Vocational School No. 5 in Augsburg

July 04, 2011 through July 20, 2011

Augsburg is one of the oldest cities in Germany, founded in Roman times more than 2000 years ago. The city is known for the “Peace of Augsburg” which settled grievances between religious factions in the 16th century and established religious tolerance in Europe by law for the very first time.

Vocational School No. 5 in Augsburg, Germany, took advantage of the opportunity offered by the roaming exhibition “Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman” and incorporated it into the curriculum of its nondenominational religion classes. The information was divided into three educational units to provide the religion instructors a teaching aid for finding the similarities between Christianity and Islam.

Seven other vocational schools in Augsburg adopted this idea and had their classes visit the exhibition, resulting in more than 10.000 vocational students of the age between 17 and 23 being given the opportunity to learn about Islam and the relationship with Christianity.

At the exhibition opening, Mayor Hermann Weber started his speech with an Arabic saying: “Pitch your tents far apart, but keep your heart nearby,” meaning that it is important to get to know and appreciate each other, with dignity and respect. For Augsburg, the “City of Peace,” this is a special — and historic — obligation.

Oman’s Ambassador to Germany, Dr. Zainab Al-Qasimiyah emphasized in her speech the importance of religious tolerance for relations between countries and for the Sultanate of Oman. Additional opening remarks were offered by Mr Martin Neumeyer, the Commissioner for Integration of the state of Bavaria, and by Dr Nikolaus Hueck and Meinrad Hoerwick, the representatives of the Evangelical and Catholic churches.

Mohammed Al-Mamari, representing the Ministry of Religious Affairs of Oman, described the aims of the Ministry, and Mr Georg Popp of the German-Omani Association, who organized this exhibition, explained how this project came to be.

Further contributions to the success of the event were made by the Omani religious singer Anwar Al-Asmi, who delighted the audience with his melodious songs, which dealt with the love of home, country, and the Prophet Mohammed. Visitors were also fascinated by the skill of the Omani calligrapher Saleh Al-Shukairi, who wrote the names of the guests in Arabic calligraphy.

Excerpt from the speech of Mr. Hermann Weber, Mayor of Augsburg:

"... I am convinced that peace can be sustained only when we know and appreciate each other, and can treat each other with dignity and respect. To pave the way toward peace and tolerance is needed everywhere on earth. But especially here in Augsburg we feel obliged, we see it as an important and historic duty!

"Since the Peace of Augsburg in 1555, religious peace and parity have been central themes of the city's history, continuing today, promoting dialogue through various projects and measures, and taking a stand for the equal co-existence of diverse religions and diverse groups of society.

"It is in this context that the exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" is taking place, offering an overview of current Islamic practices in a modern Arabic society. For this I am most grateful to the organizers and to our guests from the Sultanate of Oman."

Mr Hermann Weber, Mayor of Augsburg, the "City of Peace."

HE Dr. Zainab Al-Qasmiah with Mr. Hermann Weber, Mayor of Augsburg

The audience at the opening event.

Catholic Church School Board, Augsburg Diocese:

"...Regarding themes relevant to today's society and attitudes, I ask the students what sort of society do we want in the future, what sort of society do you see yourself living in in 10 years? What should the rules be, which attitudes should prevail, under which circumstances? Do we want to live in mutual understanding with a peaceable disposition, or in a society void of respect, without tolerance for one another?"

"Email or text messages can be used to exchange information, but to understand someone requires personal contact, personal encounters, conversations eye to eye. Some of you have come a long way to be here, specifically for the personal dialogue, for the mutual exchange. Achieving mutual understanding might be enabled through an argument with someone, resulting in agreement.

"This exhibition opens a dialogue, enables inquiries, creates a meeting point which encourages direct communication. It stimulates discussions which are worth having, and it opens new perspectives for us on the religion of Islam and our life together, whether global or local. It is an important stone on the path to the future, which begins here today. "

Dipl.Theol. Meinrad Hörwick,
Catholic Church School Board, Augsburg Diocese

The pedagogical concept provided by the religion teachers in Augsburg

The topic religious tolerance was treated in 3 academic hours in classes of religion of all confessions in following steps:

- 1) The country of Oman: general information with an "excursion" to the foreign country by way of the film "Religious Tolerance in Oman."
- 2) What does "religious tolerance" mean to us? Discussions and personal experiences of the Christian and Muslim pupils.
- 3) Intensive discussions based on personal points of view.

A search for areas of common agreement (e.g. possibilities of mutual understanding, getting acquainted with one another, accessibility for the outsider)

5) A search for commonalities in the differences (review and comparison of the basic knowledge of religion): Muslim and Christian students determined that they actually do not know very much about their own beliefs, and were therefore not in a position to conduct a realistic and factual conversation about beliefs. Fill the knowledge gaps to the extent possible.

6) Review stereotypes and prejudices, e.g. headscarf, concepts of "jihad," the Crusades, etc.

7) Visit of the exhibition, followed with discussion, explanations, and Q & A.

Benefits of the exhibition

- 1) a better understanding of one another
- 2) many critical, intercultural, interreligious discussions; also among colleagues. (e.g. human rights in Oman?)
- 3) expanding horizons beyond ingrained thinking
- 4) increasing the likelihood that Oman will be visited, due to its liberal stance and geographical beauty.

United Nations (UN) Vienna, Austria

July 29 through August 12, 2011

The exhibition "Sultanate of Oman: In the Modern Age with Tradition" was first presented at the United Nations (UN) in Vienna, focusing on "Religious Tolerance in Oman." It was the first exhibition by an Arab country in the Rotunda, a central hub of the United Nations.

At the opening on July 29, 2011 over 70 representatives were present from prominent nations and international organizations, as well as from the Austro-Omani Association, the German-Omani Association and The Omani Society for Fine Arts' Photography Club.

The Omani Ambassador to Austria and Permanent Representative to the UN, Dr. Badr Al-Hinai, emphasized in his speech: "Our exhibition provides an introduction to cultural and historical aspects of Oman and its experience in political and social development. It also shows you Oman as an example of how people with the most varied cultural and religious backgrounds can live together in peace and harmony."

Accompanying the exhibition the documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" was shown, which was presented at the opening and continuously during the exhibition period. This film was available on DVD in 8 different languages, which was gladly received by the UN staff from around the world.

Federal Office for Migration and Refugees, Nuremberg, Germany

September 27 through October 21, 2011

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance in Oman" was opened on September 27, 2011 in Nuremberg at the BAMF (Federal Office for Migration and Refugees), a department of Germany's Federal Ministry of Interior, by Dr. Manfred Schmidt, President of the BAMF and His Excellence Sheikh Ahmed Al-Siyabi, Secretary-General at the Sultanate's Grand Mufti Office of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs. The BAMF hosts the German Islamic Conference - the first institutionalized dialogue between Muslims and state representatives in Germany.

Dr. Manfred Schmidt, President of the BAMF

Dr. Schmidt said that the exhibition helps in widening civil and cultural communications, pointing out that there are specialists at the Ministry whose duty it is to acquaint the German people with the authentic Islam based on their research. At the end of his speech, he thanked the chief guest and the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs for organizing such exhibitions.

HE Sheikh Al-Siyabi said that Islam and tolerance are very closely related, since the Quran calls for tolerance in many of its verses and commands Muslims to cooperate with non-Muslims in the interest of peace and happiness for humanity.

HE Sheikh Ahmad Al-Siyabi

He emphasized that the organization of this exhibition reflects the Sultanate's approach, which is to present Islam and the extent of tolerance in this religion, which also corresponds to the directives of the country's monarch His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said.

Georg Popp, Secretary-General of the Omani-German Friendship Association (Deutsch-Omanische Gesellschaft) said that the Sultanate of Oman enjoys a distinguished position because of its religious tolerance, which is noticeable to all visitors to Oman. "It is a tolerant country that welcomes other people. Oman has been practicing globalization for over 5000 years and a person's color, religion or race poses no obstacle for the development being witnessed by the Sultanate as all live in peace and security," he added.

The audience while the film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" was screened.

University Rovira i Virgili, Tarragona, Spain

October 03 through October 21, 2011

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" was displayed for the first time in Spain at the University Rovira i Virgili at Tarragona. The exhibition was presented in cooperation with Prof Enric Olivé Serret, UNESCO Chair of Intercultural Dialogue in the Mediterranean in the center of the main entrance foyer of the library, which placed it in front of practically all of the visitors.

The opening ceremony was attended by His Excellence Sheikh Ahmad Al-Siyabi, undersecretary of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, HE Hilal Al-Maamary, Ambassador of the Sultanate of Oman to Spain, Vice Rector Sra. Anna Ardévol, Prof Enric Olivé Serret, and faculty, staff and students of the university.

HE Sheikh Ahmad Al-Siyabi elaborated in his speech that this exhibition on religious tolerance in Oman is to remind people and that the world's major religions do not tolerate violence, extremism and terrorism, and specifically forbid it; and that they are rather religions of tolerance, co-existence, understanding and dialogue. He added that the aim of this exhibition is to showcase the Sultanate's experience in religious tolerance, which is a pioneering experience that has been largely welcomed by a number of countries of the world, especially as the world is witnessing growing conflicts due to incidents which were attributed to Muslims and non-Muslims.

HE Hilal Al-Maamary, Vice Rector Sra. Anna Ardévol, HE Sheik Ahmad al Siyabi and Prof Enric Olivé Serret

HE Sheikh Ahmad Al-Siyabi giving his speech.

Vice Rector Sra. Anna Ardévol mentioned in her opening remarks: "This exhibition, which begins its way through our land here at the URV, provides fundamental values in the international field to help improve understanding among peoples and thereby contribute to promoting the multiculturalism of the members of our institution and region."

The supervisor of the exhibition, Director of the UNESCO Department for Dialogue Among Civilizations in the Mediterranean, Prof Enric Olivé Serret delivered a speech in which he pointed out the role played by the UNESCO department in promoting dialogue and extending bridges of tolerance, understanding and peaceful co-existence.

He praised the role played by the Sultanate of Oman in the Gulf Region in the field of dialogue and establishing religious tolerance amongst peoples.

He concluded his speech by thanking the Sultanate for providing this opportunity for students in Spain to acquaint themselves with the true and peaceful Islam. He affirmed that dialogue is the only way to understanding other cultures and civilizations.

Islamic Cultural Center of Catalonia Barcelona, Spain

November 18 through December 18, 2011

The “Centre Cultural Islàmic Català” (CCIC) inaugurated this new community center with the presentation of the exhibition “Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman.” Hosted by CCIC Director Salim Benamara, the speakers panel consisted of HE Sheikh Ahmed bin Saud Al-Siyabi, Secretary-General of the Ifta Office, Rabbi Jorge Burdman, head of the Department of Peace and Interreligious Dialogue of the Israelite Community of Barcelona, Padre Jaime Flaquer on behalf of Christianity and Justice organization, and the Center’s Imam Mahmoud Jaafar.

Speeches on the occasion focused on the need to promote shared values among people with different religions. They encouraged cooperation and peaceful coexistence and they stressed the importance of curbing clashes and violence.

The speakers said over the years, the image of Islam was tarnished by some sections of the media which tried to manipulate public opinion and it is time to portray the true values of Islam.

Padre Jaime Flaquer, HE Sheikh Ahmed bin Saud Al-Siyabi, Rabbi Jorge Burdman, CCIC Director Salim Benamara.

The inauguration was also attended by HE Hilal Al-Maamary, Ambassador of the Sultanate of Oman to Spain, representatives of Qatar and Pakistan, as well as distinguished guests from Barcelona and members of the local community.

Religious singers presented Quranic verses and songs before and after the speeches. Following the remarks, there was informal mingling, tea and sweets were served, a calligrapher made name cards for the visitors, and ladies could have their hands painted with henna in traditional designs. In addition to the Omani manuscripts and religious artifacts, handicrafts from Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia were also on display.

The vision of the CCIC is "to play an effective role within Catalan society, as well as to promote Islamic culture and civilization as a heritage of all mankind, through dialogue and promoting mutual understanding." Among its principles are to promote the principles of Islam based on mutual respect and dialogue, with a commitment to communication and cooperation with other cultural institutions.

Its stated objectives include promoting intercultural dialogue in order to promote the welfare of the people, and to collaborate with various organizations and institutions which share its values.

Rabbi Jorge Burdman, head of the Department of Peace and Interreligious Dialogue of the Israelite Community.

November 19, 2011 through January 08, 2012

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" is being presented in a Dutch city for the first time. The exhibition was part and parcel of a day dedicated to inter-religious encounters in the Segbroek district of The Hague, organized by the United Religions Initiative (URI) of the Netherlands and the Interreligieuze Beraad Segbroek (IBS).

Some 60 visitors attended the opening in the modern library Bibliothek Segbroek, representing a majority of the religions of the world, and obviously coming from very different family backgrounds. In this milieu the show was very well received, depicting as it does that also in the Sultanate of Oman different religions peacefully coexist.

The exhibition was opened by the President of IBS, Bart ten Broek, who presented the program for the day. Also present was one of the council members of the city of The Hague, Rabin Baldeswingh, who is Dutch of course, but whose origins go back to the Indian minority in Surinam. He vividly described his relationship to three different countries, peoples, and religions - all of which he still clings to. It may safely be assumed that there will be ever more people around the world who are of mixed origins. The fundamental belief in European countries -- that no one should be discriminated against because of his origin, religion, sex or other attributes -- is of the utmost importance, especially for these people. The Hague, which is supporting this exhibition, is symbolic of this stand.

Ari van Buuren, Chairman of the United Religions Initiative (URI) of the Netherlands explained the intentional ambiguity of the abbreviation "URI" when spoken as "YOU ARE I." And I am you. We are all the same. And it is URI's responsibility to establish contacts among the religions and to promote togetherness.

HE Sheik Ahmed Al-Siyabi, representing the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, opened the show with greetings from the Sultanate of Oman. Subsequently the film "Religious Tolerance in Oman" was shown -- in Dutch -- and proved very popular.

Hanns Seidel Foundation, Munich, Germany

27th March 2012

On March 27, 2012 the German-Arabic Friendship Association (Deutsch-Arabische Freundschaftsgesellschaft e.V., or DAFG) sponsored a conference in cooperation with the Bavarian Economic Union. His Excellence Dr Salem Bin Nasser Al-Ismaily, Chairman of the Omani Investments and Export Authority, promoted investment in Oman to the more than 100 chiefs of German industry.

Opening remarks were presented by Dr. Otto Wiesheu, former Economics Minister of Bavaria and current president of the DAFG. He made the point that the tolerant, open and very pragmatic economic policy of the Sultanate is clearly the reasons for its flourishing. Dr. Al-Ismaily supplemented those remarks by explaining that during the last 40 years the government of Oman has placed special importance on education, and taking care that the same professional and career opportunities are provided to women as to men. Also related is the fact that Oman has a very level-headed policy of peace with all of its neighbors: no country can benefit economically from war. Therefore Oman is bound in friendship with all and is at enmity with no one.

Georg Popp, the Secretary-General of the German-Omani Association (Deutsch-Omanische Gesellschaft e.V.) concluded the remarks by noting the special role of Ibadhism in the development of a modern Islamic society in Oman, and invited the guests to examine the exhibition which was presented in the foyer of the conference room.

The participants each received a copy of the brochure "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" and a DVD with the documentary film on the same subject.

Universidad Complutense, Madrid, Spain

May 04 through May 11, 2012

Oman's traveling exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" was brought to the distinguished Complutense University in Madrid by Sheikh Hilal bin Salim Al-Ma'amari, the Sultanate's Ambassador to Spain, and was hosted in the Faculty of the Arts, under the aegis of the Director of the Arabic and Islamic Studies Department, Dr. Juan Martos.

The opening ceremony was attended by Ambassador Hilal Al-Ma'amari, ambassadors from the Gulf region and other countries, the Director-General for International Cooperation and Relations of the Spanish Ministry of Justice, invited guests, and more than 100 university faculty, staff, and students.

Opening remarks by Damaso Lopes, Chancellor of Complutense University, hailed the religious tolerance in the Sultanate and its respect for religion. Chancellor Lopes said the Sultanate has played and is still playing an important role in disseminating Islam through religious tolerance and respect for other peoples' cultures and religions. He added that the university, since its establishment, has had a department for languages including Arabic, in a bid to promote understanding of Arabic culture and religion.

Biblioteca Viva al-Andalus, Cordoba, Spain

June 07, 2012 through December 2013, April and June 2016

The Biblioteca Viva de al-Andalus (BVA - "Living Library of Andalusia") was created in 2002 by the Fundación Paradigma Córdoba, whose essential purpose is to remember the key role of Cordoba in the 9th to 13th centuries, the cross-fertilization of cultures of the East (China, Indian, Arabic and Persian) and West (Greco -Roman and Judeo-Christian) and the symbiosis, in Al-Andalus, of the three Abrahamic religions: Jewish, Christian and Muslim.

The exhibition was officially opened by Dr. Balbino Povedano Ortega, Vice President of the Fundación Paradigma Córdoba, who welcomed the distinguished speakers, guests and visitors. Dr. Povedano is responsible for the promotion of intercultural and inter-religious dialogue, and this exhibition on religious tolerance at the Bailío Palace is the first event in the cycle entitled "Más Culturas," meaning "diverse cultures."

Dr Maria Jesus Viguera, Cultural Director of the Foundation, explained the purpose of the Foundation and the Living Library of Andalusia and introduced each of the members of the speakers' panel, with a resumé of their publications and achievements and short biography.

Mohammed Al-Mamari talking to a visitor

Dr Viguera's said that she can see from the books which the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs has presented to the Biblioteca Viva that Oman has as much spiritual beauty as it does physical beauty, and that Oman combines its own ancient history with the history of Islam. Nowadays Oman is a modern nation state with an economy fueled by oil and gas production, which has allowed the development of a modern infrastructure as per the vision of HM Sultan Qaboos, and is being done responsibly and with respect to tradition.

Dr Amelia Sanchis Vidal, a professor of ecclesiastic law at the University of Cordoba, commended the Paradigm Foundation of Cordoba for its good work, and was especially grateful to the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs for this eye-opening exhibition. She said "it was especially nice to get to know something about the Sultanate of Oman and nice to have some surprises, to learn things you did not know and did not expect."

She then took the opportunity to introduce the FORO DE CÓRDOBA promoting intercultural dialogue. The inaugural conference (2013) will be a forum on multiculturalism, pluriculturalism and religions, with emphasis on the legal status of religions in society; the relationship of individuals, states and religious beliefs; and the role of feminism in religions and society.

Due to the great interest of the visiting public, the Bibliotheca Viva al-Andalus decided to keep the exhibition on display until the end of 2013 and to present it again in September 2016.

“Werkstatt der Kulturen,” Berlin, Germany

July 20 through August 19, 2012

The Sultanate of Oman was one of the focal points of the “Nights of Ramadan 2012” at Berlin’s Workshop of Cultures (Werkstatt der Kulturen). For this reason, during the Muslim fasting period, several exhibitions pertaining to Oman are being presented in cooperation with the Embassy of the Sultanate of Oman in Berlin, the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs as well as the Diwan of Royal Court.

The exhibitions were entitled: “Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman,” “Sultanate of Oman: Modern Living with Tradition” and the photo exhibition “Oman: People & Moments” produced by the photographer Anja Menzel.

The Secretary-General of the German-Omani Association, Georg Popp, noted in his welcoming speech the very positive response throughout Europe to the exhibition “Religious Tolerance: Islam in Oman.” Mohamed Al-Mamari, Scientific Advisor to the Minister for Religious Affairs, emphasized in his speech the importance of interreligious dialogue for a peaceful future. Personal experiences, encounters and friendships across the denominations are crucial.

Following the concert by Anwar Al-Asmi, the Omani Embassy and the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs invited the guests to an Iftar dinner in the café of the Werkstatt der Kulturen.

St. Philip's Centre, Leicester, UK

July 16 through July 20, 2012

St Philip's Centre is a charity set up in 2006 under the umbrella of the archbishop of Canterbury and is rooted in the multi-faith environment of Leicester, the UK's most ethnically diverse city. It has a superb track record of promoting positive community relations through dialogue groups, leadership programmes for young people, charitable activities and organisation of community events. St Philip's Centre specialises in providing religion and belief training to public sector organisations and has received several awards in recognition its work to build bridges across communities. In this respect, the Omani initiative to promote religious tolerance through an exhibition and related events was very much welcomed.

On Monday, July 16, 2012, Sheikh Dr. Abdullah Al-Mamari, lecturer in the Institute of Islamic Sciences, Muscat, gave a lecture on Ibadhism at St. Philip's Church. Ibadhism is the most widely practiced form of Islam in Oman. The official launch of the exhibition took place on July 17 in the presence of many honorables of Leicester; the Revd. Canon Dr. John Hall; the Director of St. Philip's Centre, Richard Brooks and the High Sheriff of Leicestershire.

Tony Robinson, Bishop of Pontefract presented the following message from the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Revd. Rowan Williams:

"I am happy to convey my greetings as Patron of the St Philip's Centre to all who are gathered for the opening of the Sultanate of Oman's first exhibition in the UK on 'Religious Tolerance'. I would like particularly to convey my greetings to the Grand Mufti of Oman, staff from the Omani Embassy in the UK and other leaders from the religious communities and civil society.

"It is good that this exhibition can highlight the vital importance of religious freedom in a world where such freedom is so often not respected.

"It is also good that the positive resources of the Ibadhi school of Islam and the tolerant traditions of the Sultanate of Oman in particular are given more prominence. I trust that the exhibition will provide a space in which mutual sharing and learning can take place.

"St Philip's is one of the foremost institutions involved in interfaith relations in Europe and a place in which all the rich religious and cultural diversity of Leicester is celebrated. May your gathering and the exhibition as a whole be a sign of hope and encouragement."

Rev. Tony Robinson, Bishop of Pontefract

University of Technology, Tallinn, Estonia

September 20 through October 04, 2012

The exhibition on Omani Religious Tolerance at the University of Technology in the Estonian capital was opened amid wide participation of academics and religious personalities.

Speaking on the occasion, Mr Ildar Muhhamedsin, the Grand Mufti of Estonia, hailed the success of the exhibition in many European countries: "Today we are lucky to have the exhibition here."

He expressed his hope that the exhibition fosters friendly relations between Oman and Estonia and provides a better understanding of Islamic civilisation.

Mohammed bin Said Al-Mamari, Scientific Adviser at the Office of the Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs, delivered a speech stating that nothing is better than spreading the message of love among the people. The same message which has been nurtured in Oman for ages, confirming that the Omani people are reaching out to all civilisations. "We have embarked on this exhibition and will continue as we are well aware of its importance," he said.

Free University of Brussels, Antwerp, Belgium

September 13 through October 10, 2012

More than 60 visitors attended the opening in Antwerp of the exhibition “Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman.”

The exhibition was presented in Dutch, the preferred language in the city of Antwerp. It was hosted by the Antwerp faculty of the Department of Comparative Religion, of the Free University of Brussels. The faculty maintains a worldwide network for religious dialogue and religious studies.

Opening the exhibition was one of the mayors of the city of Antwerp, who reported that the city of Antwerp’s economic success is only because it has been open to the world since ancient times. The population is multilingual, accepting of different religions and accustomed to dealing with people from many cultures. Mohammed Al-Mamari, Advisor to the Minister of Religious Endowments and Religious Affairs of the Sultanate of Oman, described the parallels between Belgium and Oman, for example that for many centuries the religiously persecuted of other countries were accepted and assimilated. This is a principle of and basis for religious tolerance.

The audience during the opening session

Religious tolerance and diversity of religions is a major issue both in Antwerp and throughout Belgium. Accordingly, representatives of more than ten religious communities in Antwerp attended the opening including the Catholic Church, which represents the majority of the population in Belgium; Coptic Christians; Jewish rabbis; and representatives of Islamic communities in Antwerp. Representatives of the Catholic Church and of the Ministry of State also spoke at the opening, and the exhibition was even acknowledged by the European Commission, and reviewed by its representatives.

The exhibition in Antwerp was a welcome addition to the development of an interfaith network for religious tolerance, in which the Sultanate of Oman is contributing as one of the Islamic countries.

Volkshochschule (VHS), Aachen, Germany

November 07 through November 30, 2012

The adult education centre (Volkshochschule) in the German city of Aachen hosted the exhibition of Religious Tolerance in the Sultanate of Oman from November 7 to 30.

On the occasion of the opening ceremony Mohammad bin Said Al-Mamari, Scientific Adviser at the Minister's Office said that the exhibition of religious tolerance in Oman is a continuing opportunity, a renewed effort and on-going quest for religions, cultures and peoples who love goodness, happiness and security.

Mohammed Al-Mamari said the goal of the exhibition since the beginning has been to find a common ground among peoples and civilisations, and that this ground gets support and presence of various institutions. He added the exhibition has enjoyed since its inception in April 2010, a new gush of positive interaction, started simple and modest, but now has grown and expanded to a wide range of workshops for a better mobility in the relations between religions and cultures in countries visited by the exhibition so far in Germany, Spain, Netherlands, Britain, Belgium and Estonia.

UNESCO Chair Bologna University, Italy

January 09 through January 18, 2013

The exhibition opened on January 8, 2013 on the premises of The John XXIII Foundation for Religious Studies, a research library with an extensive collection of nearly 1,000,000 works, making it one of the largest and most important centers for religious studies in Europe. It publishes, educates, serves, organizes, hosts and communicates research in the field of religious studies.

The director is Dr. Alberto Melloni, who is also the UNESCO Chairholder in Religious Pluralism and Peace, which was established in 2008 at the University of Bologna. The Chair seeks to deepen the multidisciplinary understanding of religious issues, emphasizing among other things the relevant role of history as a tool to understand diversity and to be able to accept pluralism as a key to human culture.

Also in attendance were representatives of city of Bologna and the region of Emilia Romagna; Dr. Massimo Baldini, Political Science Editor of Il Mulino, approx. 75 distinguished guests, and Dr. Saif Al-Busaidi and Salem Al-Haddad from Oman.

Dr. Alberto Melloni, the UNESCO Chairholder in Religious Pluralism and Peace

In opening the exhibition, Dr Melloni praised this initiative of the Sultanate of Oman, and expressed his appreciation to the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs. The need for interfaith dialogue and mutual understanding is today greater than ever, and the projects conducted in the John XXIII Foundation for Religious Studies contribute to this effort.

Mohammed Al-Mamari, International Programs Director of Oman's MARA succinctly described Oman's historical traditions leading to today's tolerant society, which is open and supportive of other religions. On behalf of the MARA, tokens of appreciation were bestowed upon Dr. Melloni, Mrs. Angelina Alberigo, widow of the Foundation's founder, Dr. Giuseppe Alberigo; and Dr. Anelaura Trombetti, Director of the CISDI (Interdepartmental Centre of Islamic Studies, University of Bologna).

The University of Bologna is generally considered the first university in the western world. Its history is one of great thinkers in science and the humanities, making it an indispensable point of reference in the panorama of European culture. The University began to take shape in Bologna at the end of the eleventh century, when masters of Grammar, Rhetoric and Logic began to devote themselves to the law. In the nineteenth century a committee of historians, led by Giosuè Carducci, attributed the birth of the University to the year 1088. The term "university" was coined at its creation. Today it is considered a leader in the European university system.

City Hall, Vilnius, Lithuania

March 14 through March 28, 2013

Oman's touring exhibition with the message of "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" opened on March 14, 2013 in the rooms adjoining the mayor's office in the city hall of Vilnius, the capital of the Baltic Republic of Lithuania.

The auditorium stage was festooned with the flags of Oman, Lithuania and the city of Vilnius, with windows overlooking the snow-covered central square of the Old Town, an UNESCO World Heritage site.

The opening ceremony was well-attended, with members of the Lithuania parliament and representatives of various ethnic communities, and the general public filling the auditorium. In his opening remarks, Mohammed Al Mamari, on behalf of the Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs, told the crowd "It is my honor to be here in Lithuania to deliver Oman's message of religious tolerance and acceptance. Vilnius, with its various ethnic groups, historic traditions and various religions represented here, is very much a centre of spiritual life and science. ... It is our strong belief that peace and stability only can be realised today in any society through dialogue and mutual understanding. Vilnius is and always has been multi-faceted and multi-lingual, and as a result, is a city of dialogue."

The patron of the exhibition, Romas Jakubauskas, Mufti of the Sunni Muslim Religious Centre in Lithuania, thanked the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs (MARA), and he compared Lithuania to Oman as a country with different religions living peacefully side by side. The difference is that Muslims are in the majority in Oman, with the religious minorities protected and supported by the state. In Lithuania it is the reverse, with Muslims in the minority. "This exhibition presents a good opportunity for the people of Lithuania to learn about Islam," he said.

Prof Dr Marija Ausrine Pavilioniene, the Director of the Lithuanian parliament's committee for European Affairs addressed the gathering, stating that she is very happy to see this exhibit here, and that this exhibition is very important:

"We need more exhibitions like this to bring us closer together." She was also very pleased to learn about the role of women in Omani society, and she expressed her appreciation "to the men of Oman for being supportive of the women who play an active role in society."

The Advisor to the Prime Minister, Mr Faustas Latenas, speaking on behalf of the Prime Minister, thanked the MARA for providing this exhibit and giving the people of Lithuania an insight to Oman. He emphasized that "the very concept of 'tolerance' already indicates an awareness of differences, a necessity for making it possible to live in peaceful coexistence."

On behalf of the Union of the Communities of Lithuanian Tatars, Prof Adas Jakubauskas, Chairman, expressed his gratitude to the MARA and to HM the Sultan of Oman for sending this exhibition here. "It shows a clarity of thought and progressive thinking, and in presenting Islam to the people of Lithuania it corrects some misperceptions. Muslims having been living in Lithuania for more than 600 years, but a majority of people here are unaware of the tenets of Islam."

Mr Julius Sabatauskas, member of parliament and chairman of the Committee on Legal Affairs commented that the title of exhibition, with its emphasis on "tolerance" is excellent because different people have different ideas of what tolerance means. "This exhibition opens a dialogue between peoples to define and promote tolerance. And it not only promotes good relations between religions but also between different countries, and promotes peace in the world."

University Salve Regina, Newport, Rhode Island, USA

April 8 through April 23, 2013

Oman's touring exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" opened on April 8, 2013 for the first time in the USA at the Salve Regina University in Newport, Rhode Island, which this year is commemorating the 350th anniversary since its founding by royal charter of the British crown.

The opening ceremony was attended by Oman's ambassador to the United States, Her Excellence Hunaina Sultan Al-Mughairy, representatives of the Ministry and the University, many distinguished guests, and students and faculty of the university.

The president of the University, Sister Jane Gerety welcomed the Omani delegation and praised the initiative of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs promoting inter-religious dialogue and mutual understanding. "We are a Catholic university but we welcome people of all faiths. As the students become involved in the greater world their appreciation of the world's diversity should be in depth. Our Christian perspective leaves place for the beliefs of others."

HE Ambassador Hunaina Sultan Al-Mughairy stated how pleased she is to see this exhibition here. Oman and the United States have enjoyed good relations for 200 years, and share common interests and objectives in the Arabian Gulf region. "The relationship between Oman and the United States stands as a model of how free people, determined to maintain their territorial integrity and political independence, can and do cooperate for their mutual interests."

The nearly 200 years of the mutually beneficial and fruitful relationship between the two nations started with a treaty of amity and commerce — one of the first agreements of its kind with an Arab state — which was concluded between the United States and Muscat in 1833. The first Arab diplomatic mission to visit the United States was an Omani delegation arriving in New York aboard The Sultana in 1840.

She explained further that there are many religious groups which practice their faith freely in Oman, and that the sultanate, under the wise leadership of HM Sultan Qaboos, has taken many initiatives, inside and outside the country, to promote the core Islamic values of peace, cultural dialogue, and coexistence. “Oman has consistently called against bigotry, fanaticism, extremism ... which can only cause division and anxiety between cultures...”

Ambassador Al-Mughairy added further that several Sultan Qaboos Chairs have been endowed at prestigious universities around the world, including four in the United States, with the objective of encouraging a global community living in peace, harmony and mutual understanding.

In his opening remarks, Mohammed Al-Mamari, Advisor to and speaking on behalf of the Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs, said that “Rhode Island holds a unique place in the evolution of human rights in the modern world. When King Charles II approved the Charter in July 1663, it marked the first time in modern history that individuals within a society were free to practice the religion of their choice without any interference from the government. This freedom was extremely radical in an age marked by wars of religion and persecution of people for religious beliefs.”

Following the opening remarks, excerpts from the documentary film “Religious Tolerance in Oman” were presented, with a question and answer session involving Mr Al-Mamari, Rev. Douglas Leonard, Director of the Al Amana Centre and members of the audience. The Al Amana Centre is an interfaith institution in Muscat. Rev. Leonard is an American living and working in Oman since 2010.

Artists contributing to the opening ceremony were Anwar Al-Asmi, religious singer, and Madny Al -Bakri, whose colorful artworks are inspired by Quranic verses and Islamic calligraphy.

University of Education, Freiburg, Germany

June 12 through June 30, 2013

On June 12, 2013 Rector Prof. Druwe opened the exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" in the foyer of the University of Education, Freiburg. In attendance from Oman were senior representatives of the Ministry of Religious Affairs: Ahmed Al-Farsi, the Director General of the Ministry; and Mohammad Al-Mamari, exhibition project manager; and from the Omani Embassy in Berlin, Counselor Nasser Al-Manwari. The German-Omani Association was represented by Georg Popp, secretary general.

Prof. Feininger from the Institute of Theology gave the opening speech. He has served as religious education consultant in participation with this exhibition, and in 2011 was invited to Oman to lecture on inter-religious understanding from a Christian perspective.

On behalf of the city of Freiburg, the exhibition was welcomed by Mr. Ibrahim Sarialtin, the first Turkish-Muslim member of the city council. The German federal Office for Migration and Integration was represented, as well as the Society for Jewish-Christian Cooperation, and the Freiburg-

Town Hall, Ljubljana, Slovenia

December 03, 2013 through January 06, 2014

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" opened on December 3, 2013 at the Ljubljana Town Hall sponsored by Islamic Culture Center. Ljubljana is the capital and largest city of Slovenia, a member of the European Union, located between Austria, Italy and Croatia.

The exhibition was opened by Ljubljana's mayor Zoran Jankovic, Mufti Nedžad Grabus, and representing Oman's Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, Sheikh Ahmed Saud Al-Siyabi, Secretary General of the Iftaa office.

The Sultanate of Oman was also represented by HE Dr Badr Mohamed Al-Hinai, Oman's Ambassador accredited to Slovenia and Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Vienna. Distinguished guests included Danilo Türk, the former president of Slovenia; Dr Marjan Cencen of the Foreign Ministry, and the ambassadors of Egypt and Jordan attended the opening ceremony, along with more than 200 guests and visitors.

Mayor Jankovic welcomed the distinguished guests by name, and welcomed the close ties to the Sultanate of Oman, which has demonstrated over time its commitment to openness and tolerance. He also expressed his appreciation to the Islamic community, and said he did not know who was more looking forward to the opening of Ljubljana's only mosque, the Mufti or himself!

Mohammed Al-Mamari explaining the exhibition to guests

Following the Mufti's opening remarks, Sheikh Al-Siyabi reiterated Oman's historic legacy of coexistence both at home and abroad, stating that "Just as inside Oman, it has been the same abroad, wherever the Omanis lived and traded, such as in East Africa and Southeast Asia. Omanis have coexisted with everyone, even with the pagans and atheists. It is the human side which has power over relationships and life. The Omanis understand this through the words of the prophet Mohammed, peace be upon him, when he stood up at the funeral of a Jew out of respect for his humanity, and asked "Does not every man have a soul?"

Ambassador Dr. Badr Al-Hinai stated that he hopes this exhibition "will spread further in Europe and cross many more borders, within the framework of Oman's National Plan for the Alliance of Civilizations, devised in 2009 to promote tolerance and coexistence between civilizations and religions. Oman has been adamant about fostering religious tolerance."

International Islamic University, Islamabad, Pakistan

March 04, 2014

Islamabad was the 43rd location for the touring exhibition "Oman's message of Islam" which was commissioned by the Ministry of Religious Endowments and Religious Affairs (MARA) for presentation in various countries around the world. The intent of the exhibition is to share Oman's experience of religious tolerance between the different religions in the country. The exhibition was held in the central library of the international Islamic University in Islamabad.

The teaching staff and senior government officials were invited to the exhibition to learn more about Oman. The exhibition as currently presented contains 24 panels, 4 panels more than previously. The visitors learn of the cultural importance of religious tolerance. The documentary film "Religious Tolerance in Oman," produced specifically for the exhibition, was also shown.

Mr. Sardar Mohammed Yusuf, Pakistan's Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs, opened the exhibition. In his speech he said that the exhibition "will improve the culture of tolerance between people; such activities are very important to reduce the gap between the religions and to correct the misunderstanding of Islam's message created by small groups of Muslims. Islam stands for mercy and mutual coexistence."

Mohammed bin Said Al-Mamari, Scientific Advisor to the Minister of MARA and supervisor of foreign exhibitions, thanked the university for embrace the show and pointed to the efforts of the Sultanate of Oman in spreading the values of understanding. He also expressed his thanks to the President of the Senate of Pakistan, esteemed officials and distinguished guests for the honor they conveyed by visiting the exhibition. HE Ambassador Riad Ben Youssef, the Sultanate's ambassador to Pakistan, also bestowed his gratitude on behalf of the government.

São Paulo, Club Homs, Brasil

June 27, 2014

The traveling exhibition on Islamic life in Oman was held in the city of São Paulo, Brazil, after traveling to 46 cities around the world.

The exhibition, 'Tolerance, Understanding and Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam' was held at Club Homs in São Paulo.

The event was organised by Oman's Embassy in Brazil and supported by the Arab Brazilian Chamber of Commerce.

"It is an international exhibition. It is very important to see the role of religion in life. If you look at the wars in the Arab world today, they are not related to religion," said HE Khalid Salim Al-Jaradi, Oman's Ambassador to Brazil.

The exhibition had a total of 44 panels and was divided into two parts. The first one showed religious tolerance in Oman while the second depicts aspects of modern life in the country.

The 48th stop of 'Islam Mission from the Sultanate of Oman's Exhibition organised by the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs was launched at Foz do Iguazu in Brazil under the auspices of Reni Clovis de Souza Pereira, Mayor of Foz do Iguazu, in the presence of Dr. Khalid bin Said Al-Jaradi, Sultanate's accredited Ambassador to Brazil, members of the Brazilian parliament, representatives of Arab and Islamic communities, a number of businessmen, media men and university students.

At the beginning of the launching ceremony, the Sultanate's accredited Ambassador to Brazil delivered a speech where he said that this mission stresses the importance of joining all hands to ensure work peace and constructive living so that everyone can enjoy the fruits of fair comprehensive development.

Reni Clovis de Souza Pereira, Mayor of Foz do Iguazu, in his speech delivered on this occasion, said that such stops help in enhancing cultural integration among peoples and will enhance the knowledge of Brazilians about Islam and Islamic culture.

Mayor Pereira of Foz do Iguazu stressed in his speech that such stops help increasing the cultural and civilisation integration between peoples, and he called upon the Secretariat of Communications and Public Relations in Foz do Iguazu to invite the largest number of students from all nationalities to visit this cultural stop. He emphasized that this cultural event will increase the knowledge of Brazilians to the culture of Islam.

Mohammed bin Said Al-Mamari, the Scientific Adviser at the office of the Minister of Religious Affairs and General Supervisor of the Foreign Exhibitions, delivered the Ministry's speech and hailed the support provided by the Brazilian officials to ensure the success of the exhibition.

He pointed out that the exhibition displays the Sultanate's experience in religious tolerance and peaceful coexistence with other races; a unique experience the world can benefit from and build upon.

The Sunni community requested to present the exhibition in their space on July 05. Also here many people came to improve their knowledge about Islam in Oman and life in the Sultanate today.

Cambridge University, Cambridge, UK

August 04 through August 08, 2014

The exhibition “Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman’s Message of Islam” was hosted in Summer 2014 at Madingley Hall at Cambridge University.

The presentation of the exhibition coincided with the annual Cambridge Inter-Faith Programme. The seven-day programme is organised in collaboration with the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in the Sultanate.

The idea of the Cambridge Interfaith Programme is to bring together future religious leaders from the Abrahamic religions for an intensive period of immersion in inter-faith and cross-cultural encounter, to resource practical peacemaking and conflict-transformation efforts.

Professor David Ford delivered a speech during which he thanked the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in the Sultanate for its efforts to promote tolerance and peaceful coexistence.

Kennesaw State University, Kennesaw, Georgia, USA

October 02 through October 31, 2014

Oman's exhibition promoting tolerance, understanding and peaceful coexistence opened for the second time in the United States on October 2, 2014 at Kennesaw State University, located approximately 20 miles from Atlanta, Georgia. The university's modern campus in a rural setting is conducive to academic learning for the 25,000 students enrolled here.

The American Association of State Colleges and Universities has awarded Kennesaw State University an award for excellence and innovation in international education, one of only two such awards presented among the organization's 400 member institutions nationwide.

Among the initiatives cited for the AASCU honor is Kennesaw State's 30-year-old "Year of" annual country study program that dedicates each academic year to a particular country or region. The program features more than 30 lectures, performances, exhibits and other cultural events and an international conference throughout the year. During the 2014-2015 academic year, the University is celebrating "Year of the Arabian Peninsula."

Dr. Daniel Paracka, director of academic initiatives for the University's Global Affairs Division

“The country study program has introduced thousands of Kennesaw State students to the rich diversity of world cultures that make up the human family,” said Daniel Paracka, director of academic initiatives for the University’s Global Affairs Division. “Annually, it results in the creation of new courses and curriculum, research projects, education abroad programs, and global partnerships. Its success is based upon campus-wide collaboration and input, and is based upon and builds upon the expertise of our faculty, staff and students.”

On behalf of the President Daniel Papp, Dr. Daniel Paracka welcomed the approx. 100 students, staff, faculty and guests in attendance at the exhibition opening, and introduced the other speakers.

“This award validates the extremely high value Kennesaw State places on international education,” said Lance Askildson, the University’s vice provost for global affairs and chief international officer. “The institution is profoundly committed to educating globally competent students who can understand and navigate cultural differences as both successful professionals and engaged citizens.”

Representing the Sultanate of Oman from Oman’s embassy in Washington, D.C., counselor Salim Al-Kindi, and information attaché Hanan Al -Kindi, expressed their gratitude to the university for hosting the exhibition in such beautiful surroundings.

A member of the exhibition’s organizing team, Michael Dickinson, offered a few words on the background and evolution of the exhibition, and distributed samples of genuine Omani frankincense, and DVDs with the documentary film “Religious Tolerance in Oman,” produced specifically to accompany the exhibition.

Grand Valley State University, Allendale, Michigan, USA

The Kaufman Interfaith Institute was the host of Oman's third exhibition opening in the USA, held in the Pew Idema Library of the Grand Valley State University, adjacent to the city of Grand Rapids, Michigan, the US state with the second largest Arab population, after California. Attending the opening reception were Dr. Thomas Haas, President of Grand Valley State University; Dr. Douglas Kindschi, Director of the Kaufman Interfaith Institute; Dr. Lee Van Orsdel, Dean of University Libraries; Mohammed Said Al-Mamari, from Oman's Ministry of Religious Endowments and Religious Affairs, and representatives from the Embassy of the Sultanate of Oman in Washington, D.C.

Under the leadership of President Haas, the Grand Valley State University has developed state-of-the-art facilities, a first-rate faculty, and now has more than 25,000 students. The GVSU is devoted to contributing to cultural understanding. The Kaufman Interfaith Institute, affiliated with the GVSU, is committed to facilitate mutual respect and greater interfaith understanding. Its director, Dr. Douglas Kindschi has come to know Oman personally through visits to the Sultanate, and has also collaborated with Professor David Ford, of the Cambridge Interfaith Institute (UK), in promoting inter-religious dialogue.

The Pew Idema Library, co-host of the exhibition, won the 2012 Award of Excellence in Academic Libraries. Chief Librarian Dr. Lee Van Orsdel, stated that "This exhibition is exactly what we designed this space for: a place where students can step out of their routine, can consider some of the important questions of the world, and — at the heart of the most important questions in the world — how to understand each other's deepest beliefs and practices. I believe this exhibition will lead us into more deeply understanding the country of Oman and its membership in the world community and how we can learn from the approaches they take."

In conjunction with the exhibition "Oman's Message of Islam," the Grand Valley State University in Allendale, Michigan, commissioned a series of events to explore the world of Islam, highlighting religion, politics and culture in the modern Arab society of Oman. Following the opening reception and film screening on October 13, 2014, the exhibition hall was used in the days following as a backdrop for a lecture on modern-day Oman by Prof. Sebastian Maisel; a presentation entitled "Interfaith in the Middle East: Rays of Light in Darkness;" an open panel discussion; video conversations with overseas alumni; and other events.

“Association Coexister,” Paris, France

October 10 through October 12, 2014 and
November 15 through November 16, 2014

Starting in July 2013 five French students, between 19 and 28 years old, all members of the French national youth interfaith movement “Coexister” – Muslim, atheist, Christian, Jewish and agnostic – traveled around the world, visiting more than fifty countries. Their goal was to meet people who are involved in interfaith dialogue and who promote coexistence, showing that “it is possible to live together;” and to identify initiatives worldwide which promote interfaith dialogue. The group visited Oman by invitation of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs.

From October 10 to 12, 2014 representatives of 20 groups of Coexister in France and Belgium met in Paris for their 6th annual general meeting.

The members of the InterFaith Tour took this opportunity to share their impressions and experiences about Oman last year and to show the video they made documenting their time in Oman, with the exhibition “Oman’s Message of Islam” forming the backdrop for the event.

More than 100 people from all over Europe and the Paris area gathered in Paris on invitation of Association Coexister to celebrate together the united Nations Day of Tolerance on November 16. All of them represented organizations working in the field of interreligious dialogue. The goal of the meeting named “InterFaith Dialogue and Common Action: Why and How” was to offer a space to share good practices. A panel debate was followed by various workshops to exchange ideas and experiences.

St. James Cavalier Centre for Creativity, Valletta, Malta

The exhibition "Oman's Message of Islam" was inaugurated at the St. James Centre for Creativity in Valletta, the Maltese capital, by His Excellency Dr. George Vella, Foreign Minister of Malta; and HE Sheikh Ahmed bin Saud Al Siyabi, Secretary-General of the Office of the Grand Mufti of the Sultanate.

Among the guests were HE Joseph Mangion, Ambassador of Malta to the Sultanate, a number of ambassadors accredited to the Republic of Malta and other government officials from both Oman and Malta.

HE Dr. George Vella, the Foreign Minister of Malta, mentioned that this exhibition occurs in conjunction with the celebration of forty years' relations between Malta and Oman, which began on the fourth of November 1974. He emphasized the importance of strong common relations between the two sides, not only at the official level, but also between the peoples of Malta and Oman.

The audience of the opening ceremony

HE Dr. George Vella, the Foreign Minister of Malta:

“The exhibition comes at a very important time, as violence and extremism prevail throughout the world, confirming the need for tolerance, understanding and coexistence.

“Malta is proud to host this exhibition, which is ground for further bilateral cooperation between Malta and the Sultanate of Oman and which will lead to further activities being undertaken between both sides in the future.”

At the conclusion of his speech, the Maltese Foreign Minister thanked the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs for its cooperation which resulted in the placement of this exhibition in Malta, and encouraging all to take advantage of this opportunity and review its contents.

Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, USA

October 27 through November 25, 2014

The Ohio University Multicultural Center hosted the exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" at the Multicultural Center Art Gallery, with the opening ceremony held on November 1, 2014.

At the opening reception the Omani Student Association invited Dr. Bashar Kayali to speak. He spoke about the importance of tolerance in a globalized world. The speech was well received. The Omani Student Association handed out bags containing information about Oman. They also provided artifacts for a display case that is in the gallery.

The exhibition was held as part of Ohio University's International Education Week (Nov. 12-16), and in conjunction with the UN's declared "International Day of Tolerance" at which time the university hosted a Tolerance Walk on the actual Day of Tolerance (November 16, 2014). The walk ended at the gallery where a panel discussion about tolerance was held.

Winsome Chunnu-Brayda, Associate Director of the university's Office for Diversity and Inclusion, noted that: "If we were to look in Western media to see what they have to say about the Middle East, we would depict it with oppression of women and violence. This (exhibition) is a counter-narrative to that story."

OU is the first school in the USA to simultaneously have this exhibit with an Omani Students Association at the school. Saif Al Wahaibi, president of the OSA said "I tell people I'm from Oman and people ask me where that is. You never hear anything about us, but Oman is very politically active. We mediate between countries on issues of petroleum business and territory. People will generalize in their perceptions, but we live in one of the calmest, safest countries in the world."

The Omani Students Association at OU has about 65 members from Oman. Many of the members are women, which reflects how well Oman represents tolerance in its own society.

"Women have a lot of opportunities. They hold high positions in the government, and other key positions. The ambassador of Oman in the U.S. is a woman," Al-Wahaibi said. "In terms of scholarships to the West, they are equal when competing for scholarships. At OU last year, most of the people from Oman were girls."

Rashid Al-Saadi, vice president of the Omani Students Association, said the freedoms in Oman and America are synonymous.

Grand Rapids Public Library, Michigan, USA

November 03 through November 16, 2014

The exhibition at Grand Rapids Public Library was opened with speeches by Mayor George Heartwell and Rev. Wes Granberg-Michaelson, who was the previous executive director of the Reformed Church in America. Grand Rapids is the second-largest city in Michigan (after Detroit). Michigan has been known to hold the largest Muslim population in the United States.

In recognition of the upcoming International Day of Tolerance, Mayor Heartwell spoke of his hope for the exhibit to contribute to Grand Rapids becoming more and more a place of religious tolerance and understanding.

Rev. Granberg-Michaelson spoke of the unsurpassed hospitality of the Omani people and His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said Al-Said. He traveled to Oman a few years ago for a special event and spent over 2 hours conversing with the Sultan regarding religious tolerance and the historic relations between his church and Oman.

Rev. Justin Meyers, who hails from Michigan and is working in Oman as Educational Programs Director at the Al Amana Centre in Muscat, gave a very positive presentation on the work of the Al Amana Centre in promoting Muslim-Christian interfaith dialogue, and his experiences there, stating that "I am grateful that this exhibition will contribute to the people of Grand Rapids' perceptions of Oman and the wider world of Islam."

Islamic Foundation Markfield, Leicestershire, UK

November 03 through November 10, 2014

The Mayor of Hinckley and Bosworth Borough Council, Councillor Jeffrey Bannister, opened the exhibition at The Islamic Foundation in Markfield on Tuesday, November 4th, 2014. Entitled "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam," the exhibition was held in recognition of the UN International Day of Tolerance and showcased the diverse range of religious beliefs held in the Muslim-majority Oman.

Farooq Murad, Director of the Islamic Foundation said that the theme of the exhibition fits in perfectly with the work of the Islamic Foundation over the last 40 years. Batool Al-Toma of the New Muslims Project highlighted humanity's need to create a community and how the very essence of this community can be seen in Oman through the freedom of spiritual expression.

It was the first visit for the Mayor and his consort, Mayoress Mrs. Tricia Bannister to the Foundation, and the Mayor commented that it is "an asset not just to the Borough of Hinckley and Bosworth, not just to England or the United Kingdom, but it is a fantastic asset for the rest of the world."

Dr. Abdullah Al-Mamari from the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in Oman travelled to the UK to be at the opening of the exhibition. He shared a brief history of Islam in Oman and the importance of religious coexistence within the country, and thanked the Islamic Foundation for hosting the exhibition. Dr. Abdullah said in his address: "There is nothing better than to spread messages of peace and goodwill to all people. It is our strong belief that peace and stability only can be realised today in any society through dialogue and understanding."

The Islamic Foundation, established in 1973, is a unique and pioneering institution specializing in the fields of research, education and publication. Since its inception the Islamic Foundation has striven towards building bridges between the Muslim community and the rest of society by creating a better understanding between communities through greater awareness about each other.

Korea Foundation Cultural Center, Seoul, South Korea

November 04 through December 06, 2014

The exhibition at Korea Foundation Cultural Center was sponsored by the Embassy of the Sultanate of Oman to Korea, and hosted by the Korea Foundation.

With the sponsorship of the Embassy of Omani, the exhibition was greatly enhanced to include original artworks, photography, paintings, manuscripts and facsimile prints, shadow art, model dhow boats, the Omani dagger (khanjar) and coffee service, symbolic of Arab hospitality, and panels borrowed from the touring exhibition "Modern Oman." Videos on "Religious Tolerance in Oman" and the history of Oman, depicted visually through sand art, were also presented.

At the opening ceremony on November 4th there were more than 150 distinguished guests and visitors in attendance, including government representatives from China, Colombia, Georgia, Germany, Turkey and Ukraine, important figures from academia and the media, and religious leaders of various denominations.

On behalf of the Korea Foundation, the President, Dr. Hyun-Seok Yu; the Executive Vice President, Zeon Nam Jin, and the Director of the KF Cultural Center, Choi Hyun-soo offered opening remarks, along with HE Lee Kyung Soo, the Deputy Minister for Political Affairs, from Korea's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The Sultanate of Oman was represented by HE Ambassador Mohamed Al-Harthy, and the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs by Mohammed Said Al-Mamari.

In his speech Mr. Christian Manhart, UNESCO Representative to Nepal, emphasized:

“The exhibition aims at promoting interfaith dialogue, mutual understanding and peaceful co-existence. It promotes dialogue as a tool for reconciliation of cultural, social and ethnic differences by making aware of similarities instead of marking and looking into distinction and differences.”

Mr. Mohammad Nirdosh Ali, Chairperson, National Muslim Commission said:

“The exhibition is an initiative to spread the message of Oman; an Omani initiative, sharing the development process of Oman, including the situation of women in Oman, is commendable.

“This exhibition conveys the message of peace. The exhibition is the medium to give information on Islam, what Islam is doing for peace and development, and how other countries can learn from Islam.

“It is very interesting to learn about the culture, civilization and overall development process of Oman. As Oman is organizing the exhibition in various parts of the world, it has helped to spread the message of peace and development around the world.”

Suffolk County Council, Ipswich, UK

November 17 through November 21, 2014

Suffolk Inter-Faith Resource (SIFRE) was pleased to be able to arrange for a visit of the exhibition to Suffolk as part of its activity for National Inter-Faith Week 2014 in the Atrium at Suffolk County Council's headquarters in Endeavour House, Russell Road, Ipswich.

It was opened on Monday November 17th at 12:00, with gratitude expressed by Dr. Abdullah Said Al-Mamari representing Oman's Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs. Attending the opening ceremony were Councillor Christopher Hudson, Chairman of Suffolk County Council; Councillor Rebecca Hopfensperger, Cabinet Member responsible for Equalities and Inclusion; and Professor Nabil Sultan, of the University Campus Suffolk. Representatives of Ipswich Borough Council and of the Suffolk Faith Communities were also present.

At the opening David Capey, SIFRE Executive Officer said, "We at SIFRE are delighted to be able to facilitate this exhibition in Suffolk. The openhearted ethos of Oman towards all religions and to the followers of those religions resonates with our aspirations for the society we live in. At a time when 'Islamists' are viewed as harsh, cruel and inflexible, it is good to be reminded that Islam is a Way of Tolerance, Coexistence and Understanding."

Councillor Hopfensperger said: "Suffolk County Council is delighted to be working with SIFRE to bring this international exhibition to Endeavour House, Ipswich. Visitors to the exhibition will have an opportunity to learn more about the principles of religious tolerance in Oman. Inter-Faith Week provides an opportunity for people with different beliefs to come together to build greater understanding. I hope that people will take the opportunity to visit the exhibition while it is in Suffolk."

During the week it was on display in Ipswich, the exhibition was seen by many County Council staff and by parties of Ipswich schoolchildren who visited the exhibition. SIFRE created a quiz based around the exhibition to enhance the experience of the children.

ZEF, University Bonn, Germany

December 17, 2014 through January 15, 2015

The Center for Development Research (ZEF) is an international and trans-disciplinary scientific research institute at the University of Bonn, Germany. The University of Bonn (founded in 1818) is a public research university with a total of 525 professors and 31,000 students, and is today one of the leading universities in Germany.

The ZEF has three research departments: Political and Cultural Change; Economic and Technological Change; Ecology and Natural Resources Management. With its international doctoral program, ZEF aims to educate a new generation of academics as well as decision-makers for national and international policy and research organizations. Its international and interdisciplinary set-up as well as its size make this program unique in Germany and Europe.

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance in Oman" was on display at ZEF from December 17, 2014 through January 15, 2015. The opening took place at the "Alternative Wednesdays" event with the screening of the film titled "Religious Tolerance in Oman" on December 17, 2014. The event was attended by the head of the Omani diplomatic mission in Berlin, Mr. Hamood Al Rumhi, approximately 50 academics and scholars from ZEF, as well as members of the general public with an interest in Oman.

The event was well received by the viewers who, following the film screening, enjoyed Omani coffee and halwa and engaged in a lively discussion.

Palazzo Reale (Royal Palace) Museum, Milan, Italy

February 4 through February 22, 2015

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance, Mutual Understanding, Peaceful Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" opened on Wednesday, February 4, 2015 in the world-famous Palazzo Reale (Royal Palace) Museum, in Milan, Italy.

The opening ceremony was attended by more than 200 members of the general public from all walks of life, government officials, diplomats and the press corps.

In response to Mayor Giuliano Pisapia's invitation, Oman's Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs provided the information panels, photographs, manuscripts, calligraphy and other art works, which were on display and open to the general public in the nine rooms of the "Prince's Apartment" until February 22, 2015.

Speaking at the opening ceremony, Deputy Mayor Ada Lucia de Cesaris welcomed the exhibition and offered the hospitality of the city to the Omani delegation.

The director of the museum, Dr. Dominico Piraina, informed the guests that for the past 70 years the Palazzo Reale has been promoting knowledge of cultures, even beyond Europe. "Because its doors are open to the world, the Palazzo Reale has dedicated its resources also to Arab art and culture."

Visitors of the opening event.

In his prepared remarks, the Councillor for Culture, Filippo Del Corno, stated that Milan welcomes this exhibition, especially this year when Milan is hosting the world Expo and “promoting peaceful coexistence between peoples for a better future for our planet.”

On behalf of the MARA, Mohammed Al Mamari, Scientific Advisor to the Minister made reference to the 1700-year old Edict of Milan, issued by the Roman emperor Constantine, giving the same rights to all religions throughout the Roman Empire. The Edict of Milan marked the birth of the concept of religious tolerance in the western world, granting freedom of expression to all faiths and religions.

Also in attendance from the city council were Mr. Francesco Cappelli, Councillor for Education, and Pier Francesco Majorino, Councillor for Social Politics. About 7000 people from all over the world visited the exhibition during the three weeks it was presented in the museum.

Tirana International Hotel, Albania

April 29 through May 12, 2015

The exhibition "Oman's Message of Islam" has reached the Republic of Albania in collaboration with The Almasar Albanian Institution and in coordination with the religious affairs committee of the presidency of the republic. The opening ceremony was held in Albania's capital city, Tirana, at the Tirana International Hotel in the presence of a number of diplomats from Arab and foreign countries; the heads of universities and colleges; representatives of various religions and religious and cultural centers; journalists; and a large number of interested people.

The opening ceremony began with welcome words from Ilir Ho Julie, the chairman of the religions committee of the presidency of the Albanian Government. He said: "This exhibition is highlighting the heavenly message in all societies and we here in Albania have various religions living in peace, and tolerance." He added: "We hope for more cooperation between the two sides in the future."

Sheikh Mehdi Gora, the president of the Association also gave a speech, stating: "We thank the government and people for the opportunity to organize this exhibition, which highlights religious and cultural life in Oman." He hoped that the exhibition succeeds in strengthening the bilateral relations between Albania and Oman.

In the exhibition, Mr. Salah bin Juma Al-Shukairi gave a presentation on the beauty of calligraphy, and showed the audience his expertise and skill in calligraphy. The artist Ramlah bint Salim Albulushi also offered a presentation about calligraphy. The audience also had the opportunity to have their names written in Arabic. They were the first Omani artists to give presentations in Albania.

Omani Cultural Days, Sao Paulo, Brazil

July 28 through August 09, 2015

The official opening ceremony of the Omani Cultural Days in Brazil was held at Sergio Cardoso Theater in Sao Paulo under the auspices of Fernando Capez, President of Sao Paulo State Parliament, in the presence of HH Sayyid Fatik bin Fahr Al-Said, Secretary-General of the Ministry of Heritage and Culture.

Dr Khalid bin Said Al-Jaradi, Sultanate's Ambassador to the Federal Republic of Brazil delivered a speech at the beginning of the ceremony in which he said that there is a direct relation between the Brazilian diverse culture and the Omani, Arab and Islamic culture. He explained activities of the Omani Cultural Days in Brazil will promote cooperation, mutual understanding and the development of bilateral relations between the two countries.

Sheikh Hamad bin Hilal Al-Maamari, Under-Secretary of the Ministry of Heritage and Culture for Cultural Affairs said that based on the importance attached by the Government of His Majesty Sultan Qaboos to enhance communication with all countries of the world, the Ministry is keen to extend bridges of cultural cooperation to support all components of the cultural and intellectual capabilities.

Fernando Capez, President of Sao Paulo State Parliament delivered a speech in which he thanked the Sultanate, represented by the Omani delegation to organise the Omani Cultural Days in Brazil, specifically in Sao Paulo city, which has large Arab communities. He stressed the importance of such cultural events to introduce the various principles and foundations, which undoubtedly contribute in promoting a culture of communication and achievement of world peace, harmony and dialogue.

Jose Roberto Sadiq, Under-Secretary of the Ministry of Culture of Sao Paulo said that the Omani Cultural Days in Sao Paulo, one of Brazil's largest cities, will contribute in introducing the Omani cultural and civilizational heritage and strengthening the bilateral relations between the two countries. He pointed to the importance of cultural communication between the peoples of the world.

Omani Al Majd Glory Group presented a variety of performances, titled "Oman: Heart of Peace" that were highly appreciated by the audience. The performances were interspersed by Omani fashion shows that reflect the different fashion in the Sultanate of Oman.

The Omani Cultural Days in Brazil were organised by the Ministry of Heritage and Culture in collaboration with the Ministry of Information, the Ministry of Endowments, the Ministry of Tourism, the Foreign Ministry, the Public Authority for Radio and Television (PART), the Public Authority for Craft Industries (PACI), the National Records and Archives Authority (NRAA), Sultan Qaboos University (SQU), Omani Society for Fine Arts (OSFA), Omani Photographic Society and Oman Establishment for Press Publication and Advertising.

UNESCO Headquarters, Paris, France

October 07 through October 14, 2015

The exhibition at the headquarters of UNESCO was organized by the Ministry of Religious Endowments and Religious Affairs in cooperation with the permanent delegation of Oman to UNESCO and the Sultanate's embassy in Paris.

The opening ceremony was held in the presence of a number of prominent personages of UNESCO. Among them was H.E. Mr Mohamed Sameh Amr, Chairman of the Executive Board of UNESCO and Ambassador and Permanent Delegate of the Arab Republic of Egypt to UNESCO; Her Excellency Dr. Samira Bint Mohammed Moosa, the Sultanate's Ambassador to the UNESCO; and Mrs. Nada Al-Nashif, Assistant Director-General for Social and Human Sciences on behalf of and as representative of Irina Bokova, the UNESCO General Director. Also in attendance were a number of ambassadors, heads of religious centres and Arab communities, academicians, and a large number of guests from French society.

Her Excellency Dr. Samira Bint Mohammed Moosa welcomed those attending this event, referring to the Sultanate's efforts and responsibility regarding spreading tolerance and avoiding violence. She asserted that: "In 1995 UNESCO member states including Oman collectively pledged their responsibility to promote tolerance and non-violence worldwide." Tolerance is one of the principles of humanity that plays a major role in achieving unity, solidarity, and cohesion among nations, thus reducing conflicts between individuals and groups. "Tolerance also means respecting the culture and ideology of others, which is a fundamental pillar of human rights, justice and freedom." She said further: "Encouraging peaceful dialogue and celebrating differences are indispensable in dignifying the human being. Our diversity and pluralism represent an unestimated wealth that ought to be cultivated, through the deepening of our knowledge of one another, the broadening of our visions and mindsets, and the nurturing of our exchanges and interactions. These values complete and feed into each other and they are the ideals by which the Sultanate of Oman stands, representing the path towards peace: by putting tolerance and respect as core values of our societies, and by focusing not only on what unites us, but also on what makes us unique." She emphasized that "Through its protective laws and inclusive socio-cultural practices, Oman actively pursues tolerance and non-violence." The Basic Law in Oman prohibits discrimination against individuals on the basis of religion or religious identity and provides for the freedom to practice religious rites so long as doing so does not disrupt public order."

H. E. Mr Mohamed Sameh Amr, Chairperson of the Executive Board of UNESCO and Ambassador and Permanent Delegate of the Arab Republic of Egypt to UNESCO, made a speech in which he expressed the welcome and pride of the UNESCO executive board for sponsoring this important event. He said: "Exhibits like this one help to shed light on the diversity of the world's peoples. It helps to learn just a little bit more about the cultures of The Other, thus progressively moving all towards a rapprochement of cultures." He added: "The inter-connected themes of 'tolerance,' 'understanding,' and 'coexistence' are the building blocks of a true culture of peace, based on a commitment to the universal principles of human dignity and mutual solidarity. This exhibit is an international project that is being shown for the first time here at UNESCO headquarters, and we are

Mrs. Nada Al-Nashif, Assistant Director-General for Social and Human Sciences at UNESCO, emphasized:

“The theme and focus of this exhibition reflect the long-standing Omani traditions of pluralism and the commitment to an enriching coexistence between peoples and cultures. It is a timely reminder of the need to embrace cultural diversity, which also encompasses religious diversity.

“These are very challenging times. We witness the use of cultural and religious diversity as an instrument of division. We see systematic persecution of people on ethnic and religious grounds. We see intentional destruction of irreplaceable landmarks and a systematic and methodical vandalism of ancient sites. This ‘cultural cleansing’ — as the Director-General of UNESCO, Ms Irina Bokova refers to it — also destroys what is fundamental to peoples’ lives and constitutes their identity. In this sense, these violent acts are attacks against our common humanity and the values that bind us together as a single human family.

“This calls on us — with urgency — to find innovative, more impactful and more significant ways to build peace. More than ever, it is time to protect and preserve the progress achieved during the last decades and build new and stronger bridges for dialogue and togetherness. By using the arts and new technologies, this exhibition recognizes diversity as a source of strength, creativity and innovation for all societies.

“This resonates strongly with our mandate to lead the International Decade for the Rapprochement of Cultures (2013-2022), and UNESCO’s mission to achieve peaceful coexistence through dialogue and the acquisition of intercultural competences and enhanced ‘cultural literacy.’ It is crucial that we harness and learn from the best regional and national examples of inclusive outreach. I am sure that this exhibition will nurture our determination to pursue a more peaceful and just world.”

truly honored to host such a fine event.' He continued: "Considering the context of the world we live in today where culture is targeted for aggression by extremists, this exhibition is most timely... It shows Oman's strong commitment to the protection and preservation not only of the world's physical heritage, but also of its historical and spiritual heritage as well."

Mohammed bin Said Al-Mamari, the Scientific Adviser in the Office of the Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs and supervisor for the exhibition (Oman's Message of Islam), spoke on behalf of the Ministry, expressing his thanks for UNESCO in hosting the exhibition. He also gave thanks to the staff of the Sultanate in Paris for their fruitful and effective cooperation. In his speech, Al-Mamari announced: "It is my honor to be here in UNESCO to deliver Oman's message of religious tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence." He added: "This exhibition has appeared in more than 70 cities in more than 26 countries. Now we have the honour here in UNESCO to deliver Oman's message of salam (Peace)." Al-Mamari said "There is nothing better than to spread messages of goodwill to all people. It is our strong belief that peace and stability only can be realized today in any society through dialogue and understanding. And we sincerely believe that by working together, we can achieve the goals of religious acceptance and peaceful coexistence."

Mrs. Nada Al-Nashif, Assistant Director-General for Social and Human Sciences at UNESCO expressed her thanks to the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs of the Sultanate of Oman for sharing this exhibition on 'tolerance, understanding and coexistence' with UNESCO and its member states. She added "a special thank you to the Permanent Delegation of Oman for associating the UNESCO Secretariat with this event."

Omani artists also contributed to the success of the exhibition. The calligraphers and graphic artists Saleh bin Jumaa Al-Shukairi, Anwar bint Khalifa Al-Husainia, and Samah Bint Said Bin Saif Al-Numaniya appreciated this opportunity to showcase their talents and artistic innovations in support of this initiative of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs.

Parliament of the World's Religions, Salt Lake City, Utah, USA

October 15 through October 19, 2015

The touring exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam," sponsored by the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, was also on display at the conference of the Parliament of the World's Religions, held in Salt Lake City, Utah in the USA.

The Parliament of the World's Religions is a convocation of people of spirit and faith from around the world; at this conference more than 10,000 people from over 80 countries and 50 different religious and spiritual traditions came together to share, learn, network, and celebrate. It was first held in 1893, re-established in 1993 in Chicago. Since then it has been held in Capetown, South Africa 1999; Barcelona, Spain in 2004; and Melbourne, Australia in 2009.

Parliament Board Chair, Imam Abdul Malik Mujahid reminded that "Faith brings out the best in us, and interfaith brings out the best of our faiths."

Oman's exhibition was on display in the Cultural Hall, visited by thousands of people daily, who learned about the modern-day Sultanate and about Oman's millennia of experience in trade and cultural exchange, widespread acceptance of religious diversity, and rich seafaring history.

On Monday, October 19, 2015, a paper entitled "Preventing Violent Extremism: Inter-Religious Coexistence in Oman" was presented by Rev. Douglas Leonard, Director of the Al Amana Centre, a centre for interfaith engagement in Muscat.

MOHA Center, Kavala, Greece

November 03 through November 30, 2015

Mohammed Ali Research Center (MOHA) under the auspices of the Greek Ministry of Education, Research and Religious Affairs and the Hellenic National Commission for UNESCO, hosted the exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" in the "Imaret," an unique monument of significant Islamic architectural character in Kavala.

The opening ceremony on 7th November was joined by Mohammed Al-Mamari, representative of the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, Oman, representatives of the local authorities as well as of the Greek Orthodox Church. Among the guests were representatives of the Greek academic community, scholars and students.

The exhibition in the Imaret was presented until the end of November and it was supported by a series of interactive educational programs based on the intercultural stories of the Omani "Sinbad the Sailor."

MOHA Center was founded in 2006 in Kavala, the birthplace of Mohammed Ali Pasha of Egypt, and at the crossroads of Europe and the Middle East. The Mohammed Ali Research Center is a Greek, private, non-profit, non-governmental research center supervised by the General Secretariat for Research and Technology (GSRT) of the Greek Ministry of Culture, Education and Religious Affairs.

Housed in the only surviving integral imaret existing in the world and the only historic Islamic monument in Europe that belongs to an Arab country, MOHA aims at exploring and researching the achievements of Muslim culture and civilization before the dawn of modernity and its impact on today's world.

UNESCO Headquarters, Paris, France

November 09, 2015

During the 38th General Conference of UNESCO in Paris, the Permanent Delegation of the Sultanate to UNESCO held a reception on the occasion of Oman's 45th National Day under the auspices of Dr Madeeha bint Ahmed Al Shaybaniyah, Minister of Education, in the presence of Irina Bokova, UNESCO Director-General, and HE Dr Samira bint Mohamed al Moosa, Sultanate's Permanent Delegate to UNESCO.

Director-General Bokova praised the efforts of the Sultanate for its policies promoting education, science and culture, along with its continuous support of the international organization contributing to its ability to play its required role.

Dr. Al Moosa stated that the Sultanate has always held the culture of peace and sustainable development among its most important goals. She also extolled the efforts of HM Sultan Qaboos to establish peace and harmony at home, making Oman an example of stability and progress. She explained further that Oman's policies, based on mutual and peaceful respect within cultures while preserving Omani traditions, enable it to play a role facilitating dialogue and seeking diplomatic solutions to problems among the various areas of the world where there is conflict.

The emblem of the exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's message of Islam" was presented to UNESCO in the form of a glass sculpture. It symbolizes the diversity of religions and cultures in the world, and is symbolic of the Sultanate's project promoting tolerance, mutual understanding, and peace among peoples.

Museum of World Religions, Taipeh, Taiwan

December 01 through December 31, 2015

The Museum of World Religions is the first museum solely dedicated to promoting knowledge and understanding of the world's major religions. Combining the beauty of art and culture, as well as the insights of academic religious studies, the Museum has been the subject of considerable international acclaim.

Since its opening, the Museum has continued to host interfaith dialogues and exchanges in order to increase mutual understanding and friendly interaction amongst various religions. Its collections, exhibitions, programs, research, and publications have developed into an invaluable resource for educational institutes at all levels. The museum resized all panels of the exhibiton to big scale for display on full wall and arranged visits to the exhibition conjoined with workshops for various student groups.

The exhibition was visited by by an Omani delegation led by HH Mohamed bin Salim Al-Said. He was joined by James Wei, director of the Taipeh Economic and Cultural Office in Muscat and Mohammed Al-Mamari, director of the project.

National Cultural History Museum, Pretoria, South Africa

February 01 through February 06, 2016

The Message of Islam exhibition opened in Pretoria, the political capital of South Africa, under the auspices of Semane Molotlegi, Queen Mother of the Royal Bafokeng.

Semane said, this exhibition comes at the right time. Oman is a country of tolerance and is constantly pushing for dialogue to resolve problems between the countries. HE Mubarak Bin Salim Al Zakawani, Sultanate's Ambassador to South Africa, praised the relations. He said this exhibition carries important implications about the culture of tolerance and dialogue.

The National Cultural History Museum explores South Africa's cultural diversity in various permanent and temporary exhibitions. Exhibitions include rock paintings and engravings of the San people; thousand year old Iron Age figurines from Schroda in the Limpopo Province (described as "the best known artifacts indicating ritual behaviour in the Early Iron Age"); the Art Gallery presents an overview of South African culture through time, using cultural objects, crafts, sculpture and paintings and an exhibition on Marabastad is a true example of a cosmopolitan and fully integrated rainbow nation before apartheid.

Maritime Experiential Museum, Singapore

February 01 through February 29, 2016

The Maritime Experiential Museum and Aquarium is Singapore's first maritime museum and what makes it distinctive from other museums is that it boasts a themed environment along with a variety of complementary exhibits. It brings to life the Maritime Silk Road via life-sized replicas of historic ships, shipwreck artefacts, interactive exhibits and educational programs for everyone.

One of the main attractions in the Experiential Maritime Museum is the "Jewel of Muscat," a replica of an Omani dhow from the 9th century AD that was found in 1998 off the coast of the Indonesian island of Belitung.

It was reconstructed in Muscat using old templates and techniques. The 18-meter long hull was assembled without a single nail, as was usual at that time. The planks were sewn together with coconut fibers, as per ancient traditions, and joined precisely together. The hull was sealed with a mixture of goat fat and glue. Once finished, it set sail to Singapore. The journey from Muscat to Singapore was successfully undertaken from February to July 2010 under the Omani captain Saleh Said Al Jabri. He sailed the ship using navigational techniques of the 9th century.

Presented in this context, the exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" opened a view on Omani society to the visitors of the museum.

Ismaili Center of Toronto, Canada

February 20 through March 31, 2016

The Ismaili Center of Toronto is hosted by the Institute of Islamic Studies of the University of Toronto and the Aga Khan Council for Canada. Through programs ranging from lectures, seminars and exhibitions, to cultural and social events, the Ismaili Centres of the Aga Khan Development Network are bridges of friendship and understanding, and serve to enhance relationships among faith communities, government and civil society. In these days of religious extremism and international strife, a reminder is needed that Islam is not a monolith, that peace and prosperity can still be found in the Middle East, and that mutual understanding helps promote peaceful coexistence.

The 4-hour evening program was comprised of a viewing of the exhibition, followed by opening remarks, short presentations by Islamic and Ibadhi scholars, and a question-and-answer session. The event was attended by more than 260 people, among them Members of Parliament and other high-ranking Canadian government officials, religious leaders, university officials and students, members of the Ismaili community, Omani citizens living in Canada, and representatives from the diplomatic corps of Qatar, the UAE, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia.

Karima Karmali, Vice President of the Aga Khan Council for Canada: "By seeing everyday life in Oman in this way, we see that there is no dichotomy between Islam and modernity, nor any conflict between Islamic values and the ethical and moral underpinnings of other religions. In Oman we find ... numerous examples ... where tolerance and respect of, and for, others is a way of life; where inclusiveness and representation of those of different backgrounds ... are considered cornerstones of good governance; and where intellectuals pursuits are supported instead of suppressed. But these aren't the stories we hear or the pictures we see in the news today... In today's increasingly fragmented world, where gaps in understanding between people seem to be widening, and where campaigns of fear and intolerance – particularly in respect to Muslims – seem to be more commonplace, providing these windows into contemporary Islamic communities is essential.”

.... “The diversity and plurality within Islam which is highlighted by this exhibition is important, in that it helps contribute to a better and more informed understanding of Islam and Muslims. Too often, we find that Muslims are depicted as a monolithic or homogeneous group who share a singular interpretation of the faith. ... Therefore we applaud the work of the Omani government for making this excellent exhibition available to institutions around the world, and serving as a messenger of Islam, at a time when examples of tolerance, understanding and coexistence are needed more than ever before.”

Dr. Ahmed Al Saeedi – Deputy Chief of Mission, Embassy of the Sultanate of Oman, Washington DC: “I am honored and privileged to stand before you tonight. ... I would like to express our appreciation for the support shown to this initiative ... and that we now have the honor here in Canada to deliver Oman's message of peace.”

Sheherazade Hirji – President, Aga Khan Council for Canada: “... This project sends a profound and encouraging message about the human capacity for cooperative connection. ... ”

Griffith University, Brisbane, Australia

July 12 through July 22, 2016

The first exhibition to be hosted in Australia opened on July 12, 2016, in Brisbane on the campus of Griffith University, at the Centre for Interfaith & Cultural Dialogue. Visitors were greeted by the aroma of Omani frankincense wafting from terra cotta burners placed at the entrance. In attendance were approx 80-100 visitors, including students, faculty & staff of the university; several police commissioners; representatives of various faith communities; members of the Queensland Omani Society; plus representatives of the Department of Social Services; Middle East Connect; Access; Eid festival; Queensland African Community Council; the Consul of India; and others.

Presiding over the opening ceremony was the director of the Multifaith Centre, Dr Brian Adams, who welcomed the Omani delegation, local dignitaries, students, faculty and staff, and visitors. Speaking on behalf of Griffith University, Pro Vice Chancellor and Head of Campus (Logan) Professor Lesley Chenoweth said that "Griffith has always had a strong commitment to and relationship with Asia, so bringing Oman here is a new and special honor. Griffith has always been committed to making a difference ... "

Representing the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, Mohammed Al Mamari expressed his gratitude to the university, and to the Omani Society of Queensland, whose members provided informational materials, brochures, pamphlets, flags, banners, books, etc. Approx 10 students dressed in dishdashas mingled and interacted with the crowd.

In his speech Al Mamari stated “now we have the honor to deliver Oman’s message of tolerance; acceptance and peaceful coexistence here, at Griffith, just as we have done in Europe, North & South America, Asia and Africa.”

From the website of the Centre for Interfaith & Cultural Dialogue:

“Respect through understanding”

The work of the Centre for Interfaith & Cultural Dialogue (ICD) is to foster respect for one another through deepening our understanding of one another. The more we understand one another’s religious, cultural and philosophical perspectives, values and traditions, the better our ability to work together to strengthen our communities and overcome the challenges facing the world.

Biblioteca Viva al-Andalus, Cordoba, Spain

September 07, 2016 through September 28, 2016

The Biblioteca Viva de al-Andalus (BVA, "Living Library of Andalusia") was created in 2002 by the Fundación Paradigma Córdoba, whose essential purpose is to remember the key role of Cordoba in the 9th to 13th centuries; the cross-fertilization of cultures of the East (Chinese, Indian, Arab and Persian) and West (Greco-Roman and Judeo-Christian); and the symbiosis, in Al-Andalus, of the three Abrahamic religions: Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

Due to the big success of the presentation of this exhibition in 2014, the exhibition was shown here again at this venue on request of Dr Maria Jesus Viguera, Cultural Director of the Foundation. This time the exhibition was presented in the context of a conference on historic cultural relations between Oman and Spain (ENCUENTRO CULTURAL OMÁN-ESPAÑA).

The opening session was led by Prof. Dr. Enrique Quesada Moraga, Vice President for Innovation, Transfer and Campus of Excellence of the University of Cordoba, who welcomed the distinguished speakers, guests and visitors. Among the audience were several patrons of the Paradigma Córdoba Foundation, journalists, academics and dignitaries, including the director of the Royal Academy of Sciences and Arts of Cordoba, and the director of the Municipal Museums of Cordoba.

Prof. Dr. Quesada Moraga remarked that it is the responsibility of the University to demonstrate the importance of culture, of the values of religious tolerance, and of collaboration on proposals for dialogue which foster actions leading to peace.

Dr. Viguera described the contents of the 24 panels of the exhibition, and emphasized that these materials convey several messages by demonstrating how various religions coexistence peacefully in the Sultanate of Oman, and that freedom of conscience in the practice of religion is guaranteed by the Basic Law of the State. She also stressed the importance of the exhibition in these times dominated by voices of conflict and confrontation.

Dr. Viguera explained the purpose of the Foundation and the Living Library of Andalusia and introduced each of the members of the speakers' panel with a resumé of their publications and achievements and a short biography. The following lectures were given:

- Hydraulic engineering in al- Andalus and Oman, by Dr. Jose Roldan Cañas , Professor at the University of Cordoba.
- Stories of Omani and Spanish authors, presented by writers of the Literary Association LONG TALE: Raul Avila, Antonio Olmedo and Juan Pérez Cubillo; presentation of Omani authors by Jose Ramirez del Rio, University of Córdoba.
- The Life of Omani Merchant, Scholar, and Author, Ibn Al-Thahabi, from Sohar, who settled in Spain and died in Valencia in 1064, by Dr. Humaid Al-Nofli, member of the National Commission for Education, Culture and Science, Muscat, Oman.

Jerudong International School, Bandar Seri Begawan, Brunei

November 29, 2016 through November 30, 2016

The opening ceremony started with the Sultanate's speech delivered by Sheikh Ahmed bin Hashil Al-Maskari, Sultanate's Ambassador to Brunei Darussalam during which he said that the exhibition coincides with the Embassy's celebration of the 46th National Day, and the 32nd anniversary of diplomatic relations between the Sultanate and Brunei Darussalam.

He added that this exhibition, which was organized in more than 100 cities in 30 countries, came at the right time where acts of violence and extremism in certain parts of the world spread, so the need for tolerance, understanding and coexistence have become very urgent.

Dato Seri Setia Awang Haji Abdul Aziz bin Orang Kaya Maharaja Lela Haji Yussof, Permanent Secretary at the Ministry of Religious Affairs as Co-Chairman of the Executive Committee for the Tolerance, Understanding, and Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam Exhibition in Brunei Darussalam gave a Welcoming Address.

His Honorable Pehin Udana Khatib Dato Paduka Seri Setia Ustaz Haji Awang Badaruddin bin Pen-garah Dato Paduka Haji Awang Othman, Minister of Religious Affairs in Brunei Darussalam, patronized over the opening ceremony of the exhibition amid official and popular presence that reflects the strong relations between the Sultanate and Brunei Darussalam.

He delivered a speech affirming that Brunei Darussalam is proud to host the exhibition; a platform to spread peace and more bilateral cooperation between the two countries. Thus, the public in Brunei would know about the efforts made by the Sultanate of Oman in spreading the culture of tolerance, understanding and coexistence among peoples across the world.

It also sheds light on the similarities between the Sultanate and Brunei Darussalam in terms of religious culture, and preservation of cultural and traditional values.

Other guests of honour had been His Excellency Dato Paduka Haji Abd. Mokti bin Haji Daud, Deputy Minister of Religious Affairs, and Haji Harun bin Haji Junid, Deputy Permanent Secretary at the Ministry of Religious Affairs.

The exhibition was joined by various activities of Omani artists: a Sand Art Show was performed by Shayma Al-Mughairy; religious singer Anwar Al-Asmi did a Nasheed Performance and Saleh Al Shukhayri demonstrated the art of Arab calligraphy to the audience.

Additional to that a lecture presentation was done by Dr. Abdullah Said Khalfan Al-Mamari, Assistant Professor at the College of Sharia Sciences in Muscat and the Brunei Mosque's Youth performed Dikir Sharafil Anam.

YAS Mall, Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates

November 18, 2016

The Sultanate's Embassy in the United Arab Emirates (UAE) organised an open day at Yas Mall in Abu Dhabi to mark the 46th National Day under the auspices of Sheikh Nahyan bin Mubarak al Nahyan, Minister of Culture and Knowledge Development.

Yas Mall, the leading destination for shopping, dining and entertainment of Abu Dhabi, paid tribute to Omani heritage in the celebration of the National Day through a series of cultural activities on the 18th of November to delight and engage local communities and tourists from across the region. The event was entitled: Omani Open Day: "Oman and Emirates, the Soul of Friendship and Trustworthiness." Hundreds of Emiratis joined Omanis in celebrating Oman's 46th national day.

Traditional Omani dancers marched into the square beating drums and chanting songs of joy as they commemorated the traditions and bonds shared between the two neighbouring countries. Omani orators paid tribute to the leadership of HM Sultan Qaboos, who 46 years ago set the country on a new trajectory by laying down solid foundations for Oman's prosperous future. Archive photos showing historical meetings between the UAE's rulers and Sultan Qaboos over the decades also served as a visual testament of the long-standing alliance between the two Gulf nations.

The exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" showcased the tradition of religious coexistence in the Sultanate of Oman and every day life and traditions.

"They are showing the people that Oman and the Emirates are the same – we're all together," said Yasser Al Junaibi, 36, an Emirati who attended the festivities with his Omani friend, Mohammed Al Mukha. "I brought my kids to show them our cultures. We want to be close."

The unity and friendship shared between the two countries was emphasised by the leaders of the UAE. The President, Sheikh Khalifa, sent a cable to Sultan Qaboos congratulating him on the country's anniversary.

Sheikh Nahyan bin Mubarak, Minister of Youth, Culture and Knowledge Development also attended the festivities, touring the various kiosks set up to display and sell Omani sweets, lotions, handicrafts and jewellery.

Emiratis taking part in the celebrations echoed the leadership's devotion to their neighbour.

"We're all in the same area in the Gulf, also our culture is similar to their culture and traditions and I feel like they are as our relatives," said Tasneem Al Hashmi, an Emirati volunteer at the Yas Mall celebration that paid tribute to Omani heritage. "This makes our relationship stronger."

Omani musician Fatma Al Blushi said she was honoured to celebrate Oman's national day in the UAE.

Tokai University, Tokyo, Japan

January 16 through January 19, 2017

The Tokai University Educational System is one of the largest general education and research institutions in Japan. The total student population is about 30,000 including 700 international students. The exhibition was hosted in the Tokai University Office of International Affairs.

A quote from the official greeting of the Dr. Eng. Tatsuhiro Matsumae, President of Tokai University Educational System on the occasion of the opening of the exhibition:

“What is our mission for this era? The era during which people drew their values solely from religion or ideology is now over. We are at a turning point in history. We are entering a chaotic new century where values worldwide are diverse and complex. We must learn to appreciate those qualities valued by others and find ways to live together without posing threats to others. With this in mind, we can form new relationships between nations, between people, and between humanity and the rest of the environment.”

In addition to the exhibition, a workshop was held on January 21, 2017 regarding life and culture in Oman, with a presentation by an Omani student, Mr. Amjad Nassar Al Jadidi.

April 14 through April 30, 2017

The exhibition at Gazi Husrev-beg Library was organised in cooperation with the Islamic Mashiakhah in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The opening ceremony of the exhibition was held under the auspices of Sheikh Dr. Hussein Kavazovic ,Reis-ul Ulema (Grand Mufti) of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

In his welcoming speech Mr. Sanad Chiman, representative of His Eminence, Sheikh Hussein Kavazovic, Grand Mufti of Bosnia and Herzegovina said: "The Omani way of religion and culture is reflected in serenity, moderation, wisdom and tolerance. (...) I have the honor to welcome our dear brothers and friends from the beloved Sultanate of Oman and to thank them for choosing our city and our country to hold this valuable and beautiful exhibition, which is a strong message of peace and coexistence on the Omani way. We can not fail to say that the symbol of Omani tolerance in Islamic thought is the eminence of Sheikh Ahmed Al Khalili, the Grand Mufti of the Sultanate of Oman, who captures this simplicity and clarity of thought. This exhibition came as a result of Oman's tolerance, which is called for by Oman's appeal to renew Islamic jurisprudence in accordance with the requirements of the new era, and the Omani Grand Mufti, who dedicated his heart and thought to the whole world."

UNESCO Headquarters, Paris, France

September 17 through September 21, 2018

On Monday, September 17th, 2018, the Sultanate of Oman's commitment to peace between the world's different religions and beliefs was profiled to a global audience at UNESCO headquarters in Paris, France as part of the International Peace Conference sponsored by several member states.

A highlight of the conference was a panel discussion moderated by H.E. Dr Samira Moosa al Moosa, Permanent Delegate of the Sultanate of Oman to UNESCO; Dr Mohammed al Mamari, Scientific Advisor to the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs; Mr. Georg Popp, General Secretary of the German-Omani Association, Germany; and Mr Riaz Ravat, Deputy Director of St Philip's Centre in the UK.

The International Peace Conference was initiated by the respected Venerable Master Chin Kung of the Pure Land Buddhist tradition. Master Kung has a global following and commented that "The exhibition is very important to humanity and I invite you to continue it."

H.E. Dr. Samira Al Moosa added that "Human values are sacred in the teachings of Islam" and Mohammed Al Mamari said that "Partnerships for the exhibition are expanding and our responsibility for its renewal and development is growing."

H.E. Dr. Samira Moosa al Moosa

The exhibition was organised by the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in cooperation with the Permanent Delegation of the Sultanate of Oman to UNESCO. The opening ceremony was held in the presence of a number of eminent personalities at UNESCO. Those attending included a number of ambassadors, heads of religious centres, academics and religious and belief communities from France.

H.E. Dr. Samira Moosa Al Moosa welcomed the efforts of the Sultanate under the wise leadership of His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said and his responsibility to promote a culture of tolerance and to firmly distance the nation away from violence. In her opening speech, she affirmed that human values such as freedom and dignity are sacred values in the teachings of Islam and must be respected. Diversity is a source of wealth for societies. The statutes of the Sultanate state that there is no distinction to be made between individuals in their freedom of belief and the practice of religious rites.

Mohammed Al Mamari gave a speech in which he thanked UNESCO and the Permanent Delegation of the Sultanate to UNESCO for hosting the exhibition. He also thanked the Association of the Friends of Master Chin Kung at UNESCO and the staff in the Sultanate and in Paris for their fruitful and effective cooperation. He stressed that the partnerships with various organisations and centres in the world are continuing to expand, with hundreds of applications having been received requesting to host the exhibition in different countries.

In his visit to the exhibition, Master Chin Kung, who is 92 years old, expressed his thanks and admiration for the cooperation in organising this exhibition, which is in the interest of mankind. He highlighted the need to continue to add new educational publications on the topic of tolerance and dialogue.

Mohammed Al-Mamari and Prof. Sebastio Vieux de Ozevedo, President of the University of Porto.

The panel discussion on the experience of coexistence, tolerance and understanding in Oman began with an introduction by H.E. Dr. Samira Moosa Al Moosa. She was followed by Mr. Riaz Ravat who presented a case study about the project's impact in the UK. This talk also included an interactive quiz which set out to challenge the audience by encouraging them to think deeper.

Mr. Georg Popp spoke about the story of the exhibition since its inception in 2010. He pointed to 117 exhibitions in 35 countries. A remarkable achievement.

Mr. Al Mamari then spoke about the values of dignified living and the modern renaissance led by His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said. He pointed out the foundations of justice, equality and common human values by referring to Omani cultural heritage, trade, cultural openness and communication based on the exchange of interests.

The exhibition included details about previous campaigns such as 'Global Messages,' a global media initiative aimed at spreading a culture of coexistence and peace, tolerance and harmony through the publication of cards expressing these values for social media and websites in different languages. These messages were published via hand-printed cards and were widely disseminated.

Finally, a significant part of the Omani presence was the launch and distribution of 'World Religions – Colouring Book for Kids' which was given to each of the 500 delegates in attendance. This proved to be amazingly popular with additional copies being given away to cope with the demand. The book is free and can be downloaded from the website: www.baraza.ngo

Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Prague, Czech Republic

November 06 through November 30, 2018

The opening ceremony was held at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic at Cernin Palace under the patronage of Lukas Kaucky, Undersecretary of the Ministry, in the presence of a number of Czech personalities, Arab and foreign ambassadors, heads of religious centres, Arab communities, interested parties, academics and a large number of invited members of Czech society.

Mohammed bin Said Al Mamari, Scientific Advisor at the Office of the Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs and the General Supervisor of the "Message of Islam" exhibition stressed that the exhibition is a reflection of the success of Omani diplomacy in its efforts in the world.

During the international conference Reaching out to the Other: Overcoming Intercultural Conflicts held in Prague at the same place, Al Mamari gave a lecture entitled "The Roots of Coexistence in Oman," in which he referred to the Sultanate's good living standards and the modern Renaissance under the leadership of H.M. Sultan Qaboos bin Said and the foundations of justice, equality and common human values which he established. The participants of the conference mostly consisted of ambassadors and other high ranking diplomatic personnel.

Naturhistorische Gesellschaft, Nuremberg, Germany

November 13, 2018 through April 28, 2019

In Nuremberg the exhibition was hosted by the Society of Natural History in Nuremberg which also runs an ethnological museum at the same location in the centre of the city.

The opening event was attended by H.E. Lyutha Al Mughairy, the Ambassador of Oman in Berlin; the president of the German-Omani Association, Bruno Kaiser; and the Scientific Advisor to the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, Mohammed Said Al Mamari.

At the ceremony, H.E. Al Mughairy said that the aim of the exhibition was to extend the umbrella of the values of tolerance, understanding, and coexistence among the peoples of the world through coordination with international organisations and religious centres. "Oman has sought to express with clarity and honesty its position on various regional and international issues with a view to promoting peace."

The exhibition was accompanied by many lectures on Omani culture by renowned experts and at the closure of the exhibition, on April 28, 2019, there was a full-day festival of tolerance for the citizens of Nuremberg on the premises of the Tucher Castle by invitation of the city's mayor.

UN Headquarters, New York, USA

April 15 through April 25, 2019

The “Message of Islam” exhibition at UN Headquarters in New York was presided over by Maria Fernanda Espinosa, President of the UN General Assembly, in the presence of UN dignitaries, permanent delegates, Arab and foreign ambassadors, heads of religious centres, Arab communities, academics and a large number of US invitees.

H.E. Sheikh Khalifa bin Ali Al-Harthy, Permanent Representative of the Sultanate to the UN, stressed the importance of organising the exhibition at the UN to promote values of peaceful coexistence and interfaith dialogue, as the UN is an international organisation based on the same principles, especially after the rise in hatred and terrorism in the world following the September 11 attacks and most recently the recent events in New Zealand.

He said that the exhibition’s information panels, artistic and historical exhibits as well as sand art reflect the Sultanate, all of which are part of the noble global endeavour for the sake of man and the dissemination of the values of coexistence and peace, security and stability.

H.E. Shaikh Khalifa bin Ali Al-Harthy, Permanent Representative of the Sultanate to the UN.

Excerpts from the speeches at the opening event:

Under-Secretary-General
Maria Luiza Viotti,
UN Chef de Cabinet

“... It is especially timely that this exhibition has now arrived at the United Nations Headquarters in New York. Although it is rooted in Omani traditions, including tolerance, this exhibition has a message for the world, because hatred is on the rise, from last month’s massacre at a mosque in New Zealand, to last October’s killings at a synagogue in Pittsburgh, to attacks on churches. This exhibition is a contribution to promoting mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence. This exhibition is about better knowing each other – and seeing in each one of us our shared humanity. We thank the government and people of Oman for their support.

“Let us all focus on what unites us, and work together to defend equality and dignity for everyone, everywhere.”

Ambassador Majid Abdel-Fattah Abdel Aziz
Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States to the United Nations

“... I am happy to be present at this important ceremony on the role of Islam in finding compromises and in achieving international peace and security, one of the main purposes of the United Nations. The Sultanate of Oman is distinguished by its moderate and impartial positions and is therefore highly appreciated by the Arab Group. It is also mandated to mediate disputes between our brothers. We are proud of the role played by His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said and the role played by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Permanent Mission here in New York, both in terms of the dissemination of moderate thought to counter the far-reaching extremist thought, and in terms of supporting international efforts to find peaceful solutions to the existing global problems, especially the Arab problems, which we are seeing increase in our Arab world. This needs a lot of effort.

“We wish the Sultanate of Oman and its wise leadership success in its ongoing initiatives in this direction.”

Mohamed bin Said al Mamari, Scientific Adviser at the Office of the Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs and supervisor-general of the exhibition, affirmed that with the presentation of the exhibition at the UN, it is another proof of the success of Omani diplomacy and international appreciation, which the Sultanate enjoys under the leadership of His Majesty Sultan Qaboos.

Visitors to the exhibition expressed their happiness and appreciation over the exhibition and its message. Maria Luiza Ribeiro, Chef de Cabinet to the UN Secretary General, said it is a great exhibition that expressed the roots of religious tolerance and dialogue in Oman.

Syed Akbaruddin, Indian Permanent Representative at the UN, said: "We in India are fully aware of Oman's special traditions of tolerance and it is a bridge of intercultural understanding."

The exhibition also offered international messages through a global media campaign aimed at spreading the culture of coexistence, peace, tolerance and harmony with the publication of cards expressing these values in different languages on social media and numerous websites.

Sultan Qaboos Cultural Center, Washington, USA

June 30 through August 31, 2019

The exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence - Oman's Message of Islam" was hosted in the American capital, Washington by the Sultan Qaboos Cultural Center in cooperation with the Omani Embassy in Washington. The opening event took place in the presence of a number of prominent political figures, Arab and foreign ambassadors, heads of religious centers and Arab communities, interested parties, academics and a large number of invited guests from American society.

The ceremony began with a welcome introduction by Kathleen Rudolph, Executive Director of the Sultan Qaboos Cultural Center in Washington, considering this exhibition an exceptional event to learn about the values of tolerance and acquaintance in the Omani society.

H.E. Hunaina bint Sultan Al Mughairi, the Sultanate's ambassador to the United States of America, delivered a speech stressing the importance of the exhibition in introducing the Sultanate as part of its efforts to promote the values of acquaintance and broadcast messages of dialogue between followers of religions, as Omani laws emphasizes the protection of religious freedom and the spread of places of worship for the various religions in the Sultanate.

Her Excellency pointed out that this exhibition will contribute to introducing the American society to common human values, and to promoting the values of peaceful coexistence and mutual respect, noting that the failure of human beings in dialogue will lead to extremism and violence. She thanked the exhibition team and the Sultan Qaboos Cultural Center for organizing this event.

Mohammed Said Al Maamari, general supervisor of the exhibition, pointed out that acquaintance requires the acceptance of diversity, variance and difference, and also requires the pursuit of knowledge. He added that acquaintance also requires interaction in the act of knowledge; It is a movement from two sides and an endeavor between the two sides. Acquaintance is achieved only through this civilized movement based on a desire to reach the knowledge of the other and appreciate what he has and the desire to benefit from it, which is unlike the act of ignoring that includes ignorance of the other and unwillingness to know him or seek to build bridges to reach it.

Acquaintance, according to Mohammad Al Maamari, is an important human value that works to bridge the gap of ignorance between nations and peoples, as the reality proves that ignorance is the cause of many communication problems, the cause of mutual accusations, and a path towards hatred, violence and extremism.

The activities of the exhibition at the Sultan Qaboos Cultural Center in Washington included an art exhibition, performances of Omani calligraphers as well as religious singing by Amwar Al Asmi.

International Islamic Academy, Tashkent, Uzbekistan

October 10, 2019

The “Message of Islam” exhibition, organized by the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs in cooperation with the Sultanate’s Embassy in Uzbekistan, was launched in the building of the Islamic Academy of Uzbekistan in Tashkent under the patronage of His Excellency Abdul Ghafoor Akhmadov, Chairman of the Religious Affairs Committee of the Uzbek Cabinet, and in the presence of His Excellency Ahmed bin Said Al Kathiri, the Sultanate’s ambassador Accredited to the Republic of Uzbekistan. The event was joined by His Excellency Dr. Shohrat Yavachev, President of the International Islamic Academy of Uzbekistan, a number of prominent Uzbek personalities, a number of Arab and foreign ambassadors, heads of religious centers and Arab communities, interested parties, academics, university students, and a large number of invitees in the Uzbek community.

During the celebration, the “Oman Hall” was officially inaugurated at the International Islamic Academy of Uzbekistan in appreciation of the Sultanate’s role in building bridges of civilizational communication and in appreciation of the “Message of Islam” exhibition at the International Islamic Academy. As announced by Dr. Mohammad Said Al-Mamari, the general supervisor of the exhibition, the “Oman Hall” constitutes a symbol of the continuation of relations between the Omani and Uzbek sides.

He pointed out that the allocation of the “Oman Hall” at the International Islamic Academy of Uzbekistan is a breakthrough for broader horizons of scientific and academic cooperation with scientific institutions in the Sultanate. To foster this cooperation he announced the allocation of two scholarships for the Academy’s students - male and female students alike - to study the Arabic language in the Sultanate of Oman.

His Excellency Abdul-Ghafoor Akhmedov, Chairman of the Religious Affairs Committee of the Uzbek Cabinet, expressed in his speech his happiness at holding this exhibition in Tashkent, noting that “tolerance is an integral part of the spirituality and culture of the Uzbek people. In our country, special attention is currently paid not only to the development of the economic, political and social spheres, but also to the strengthening of friendship between different nations and ethnic groups, and the establishment of principles of religious tolerance and harmony among them.”

His Excellency added: „The fifth direction of the „Strategy of Action on the Five Priority Areas of Development of the Republic of Uzbekistan during the period 2017-2021” is focused on the issue of security, religious tolerance and harmony between peoples and races, which indicates that this issue is a priority for state policy.”

Dr. Shohret Yavachev, President of the International Islamic Academy of Uzbekistan, pointed out the importance of such meetings between countries and peoples, saying: “We are very happy that we have gathered today and are talking about religious tolerance, solidarity and understanding when the world is witnessing turmoil and conflicts between peoples and religious sects. Uzbekistan was and still is the land of security, safety and religious tolerance. History has not witnessed the occurrence of any enmity or conflict on this earth, whether religious or national, all peoples, religions and creeds residing in Uzbekistan always reside together in understanding, solidarity and harmony.”

His Excellency Ahmed bin Said Al Kathiri, the Sultanate’s ambassador to the Republic of Uzbekistan, noted: “In the last two decades, the world is witnessing a lot of conflicts and turmoil that seriously threaten international peace and security. These multifaceted conflicts and their effects have become palpable for everyone, whether through the expansion of wars and the spread of poverty or through the emergence of organizations. In view of the literature that appeared in that period, which expresses a bleak view of the human future, such as the clash of civilizations or the end of history, and others, it becomes necessary to consider means, mechanisms and approaches that enable us to avoid this bleak future.”

Dr. Mohammad Said Al-Mamari added: “The great turmoil in the world today, starting with the problems of poverty, human rights, victims of conflict, wars, economic collapse and the breakdown of values and morals, leads us to reflect deeply on the consequences of human relations in general and on the form and nature of these relations in the near or far future. This turmoil confronts us with the human and moral responsibility to contribute to the development of an approach that restores the balance between interests; it requires us to propose a workable approach that will help the world in turmoil to regain its composure and enable a balanced life in which people live on the basis of dignity, fundamental rights and psychological security. This is what the Sultanate seeks through the establishment of such joint events and programmes”.

National Library, Jakarta, Indonesia

November 14 through November 18, 2019

To mark the International Day of Tolerance, observed annually on Nov. 16, the Sultanate of Oman, in cooperation with Indonesia's National Library and the government of Indonesia, inaugurated the exhibition themed "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" in Jakarta on Nov. 14.

The exhibition was opened with a ceremony in the library's auditorium by Omani Ambassador to Indonesia H.H. Nazar bin Al Julanda bin Majid Al Said, the director of the global project "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" Dr. Mohammed Said Al Mamari as well as the Indonesian President's Special Envoy for the Middle East Prof. Dr. Alwi Shihab.

The exhibition showcased Islamic-inspired artwork, calligraphy and a live sand art performance by Shai-ma Al Mughairy. It also featured two dozen panels that offer details on Omani life, ranging from Islam's introduction to the country, women's role in politics and education, to societal traditions such as funeral customs and birth rites. The showcase also displayed a coloring book for young children on world religions, published as part of Oman's #actfortolerance initiative seeking to inculcate an acceptance of diversity among children from an early age.

The initiative "Towards United Human Values" which is also known as the Sultan Qaboos Declaration Project on United Human Values, was launched by Oman's Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs Sheikh Abdullah Bin Mohammed Al Salmi at a celebration to mark the International Day for Tolerance in Jakarta on Saturday November 16, 2019.

This initiative aims to spread the concepts of mutual understanding, religious tolerance and peaceful coexistence to foster human relations through this new initiative around the world. The advisor to Oman's Endowment and Religious Affairs Minister, Dr. Mohammed Said Al Mamari, said in the launching ceremony:

"Oman is strategically well-placed to spearhead a new national drive for religious understanding. Geographically, Oman's near neighbors include both Sunni and Shiite heartland. It is a short route to the world's largest democracy and has historical trading roots that link the world's most populous countries. For thousands of years, Omanis have traded in peace with other cultures."

"The initiative "Towards United Human Values" is very timely given the present turmoil in the world, which emanated from hatred, terrorism and misinterpretation of teachings of various religions. It calls for transcendence over rhetoric by proposing a method of action for a balanced life, in which people live on the basis of dignity, fundamental rights and psychological security."

There are three steps to reach this strategic target: The first step is to rebalance interests (different and confrontational between human beings). To achieve a universal agreement on the goals to improve people's lives. To achieve a basic level of dignity and rights. And to preserve human cohesion against annihilation and extinction.

The second step is to adopt a global system of ethics which promotes mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence, and to motivate people to unite in their efforts toward the protection of the environment. Religious, cultural and ideological differences do not prevent and are not an obstacle to our ability to share common ground and values.

The third step focuses on the need to instill or revive spiritual values in mankind and reconcile them with the evolution of reason.

The main focus of these three steps will be on a human civilizational trilogy to achieve peaceful coexistence and acceptance among human beings. Represented by the intellect, justice and morality.

The intellect is all about honoring human beings, which calls on people to respect their mutual humanity and reject all forms of discrimination, extremism, violence and hatred.

The justice is about the balancing of basic human rights in soul, society and living and benefiting from it.

As far as ethics is concerned, it is the sum of human values, especially those of spiritual and philosophical dimension.

These three directives diverge from the natural classifications and differences between people such as religion, language and culture. But the focus is on the united values, which formed the core of this Omani initiative.

Media Reach

It is of course impossible to accurately determine the number of people who read or hear about the exhibition via public channels of communication, such as print media, radio, television and Internet.

Based on the circulation statistics of the German media during the first stage of the project, there was a potential audience of nearly three million viewers for the media reports in the two years that the first ten exhibitions were presented.

Extrapolating from this, we can be confident that in the subsequent years, the worldwide media has reported on the exhibition to more than 40 million people.

Das Sultanat Oman liegt am persischen Golf und der Arabischen Halbinsel. Es grenzt an Saudi Arabien, den Iran und die Arabischen Emirate. Der Staat hat eine Fläche von 310.000 Quadratkilometern und eine Bevölkerung von 3 Millionen. Die Hauptstadt ist Muskat.

Ausstellung „Religiöse Toleranz“ bundesweit unterwegs

Von Alex Moll, Solingen

Staaten, in denen überwiegend Menschen mit islamischer Religionszugehörigkeit leben, haben im Lauf der Jahrhunderte unterschiedliche Entwicklungen und Ausformungen erlebt. In vielen Ländern ist der Islam eine Religion, die sehr wohl andere neben sich duldet. Diese eher als normal zu bezeichnende Haltung des Islam ist in den letzten Jahren durch die Medien und die öffentliche Diskussion immer mehr in den Hintergrund gedrängt worden. Gerade das Sultanat Oman ist ein besonderes Beispiel für einen liberalen Umgang mit der Religion. Das Ministerium für religiöse Stiftungen und Religionsangelegenheiten des Sultanats Oman hat deshalb eine Ausstellung vorbereitet, die in Deutschland zeigen soll, wie ein islamisches, liberales Land organisiert ist.

In der Ausstellung werden auch die Themen angesprochen, die uns christlich geprägte Europäer berühren: das Nebeneinander-Bestehen verschiedener Religionsgemeinschaften, der gelebte Islam im Alltag und bei Festen sowie natürlich die Rolle der Frau im Islam. Die Ausstellung will für den Islam werben und genauso für das Sultanat Oman. Sie beruht auf einer tatsächlich im Sultanat Oman gelebten Kultur und Gesellschaft. Die Ausstellung

Lange Tradition

Besonders wird die Situation der verschiedenen islamischen Religionsgemeinschaften im Oman angesprochen. Dort stellen die Ibaditen die Bevölkerungsmehrheit und leben gemeinsam mit Sunniten und Schiliten recht reibungslos in einem Land. Der Islam erreichte den Oman schon früh (ca. 630 n. Chr.) also bereits acht Jahre nach der Auswanderung des Propheten Mohammed von Mekka nach Medina und damit dem Beginn der islamischen Zeitrechnung. Die ibaditische Religionsgemeinschaft zeichnet sich durch einen gewissen Purismus aus, der beispielsweise in der vergleichsweise schlichten Bauweise der Moscheen zum Tragen kommt. Damit ist aber weder eine Verschleierungspflicht für Frauen verbunden noch der Druck auf Angehörige anderer Religionsgemeinschaften, sich anzupassen. Die Omanis leben seit Jahrhunderten mit Hindus und Christen zusammen. Ihnen und anderen nicht islamischen Religionsgemeinschaften ist ihre eigene Lebensweise und Kultur gestattet, soweit sie nicht die allgemeinen Sitten und Gebräuche eklatant verletzt.

Es muss Platz sein für 20 Tafeln im Format 70 x 100 cm, die von Stellwänden oder Aufhängungsleisten abgehängt werden, sowie für Repliken von Büchern und Kamelschulterblättern. Einige Ausstellungsstücke müssen aufgrund ihrer Einzigartigkeit geschützt in Vitrinen gezeigt werden. Zwei Ausstellungswände zum Aufspannen geben der Präsentation weiteres Volumen.

Weitere Informationen gibt es unter www.religioese-toleranz.de und direkt beim Autor unter Tel. 0212/244 11 35 oder per E-Mail: post@alexmall.de.

Es wird verdeutlicht, wie der Koran durch Abschrift vervielfältigt wird und wurde und wie das Heilige Buch aufgebaut ist. Einige Ausstellungsstücke, die den Koran zum Thema haben, ergänzen die Informationstafeln.

Ausstellung für VHS buchbar

zuerst ab Mitte April in der VHS Ludwigshafen gezeigt und steht nach bereits gebuchten weiteren Stationen anderen Weiterbildungseinrichtungen ab Ende September 2010 zur Verfügung. Alle Texte sind in deutscher Sprache.

Neben der Ausstellung gibt es für die Veranstalter Einladungskarten und Plakate mit einem Eindruckfeld für die individuelle Beschriftung sowie eine begleitende Broschüre, die kostenlos verteilt werden kann. Vorträge werden zu diesem Thema zusätzlich angeboten. Zwei Dokumentarfilme mit den Titeln „Religiöse Toleranz“ und „Islamische Kunst“ wurden vom Grimme-Preisträger Wolfgang Ettllich in Oman gedreht, welche im Rahmen der Ausstellung gezeigt werden. Der erste Film beobachtet das Leben der verschiedenen islamischen und nicht-islamischen Bevölkerungsgruppen in Oman und die Ausgestaltung ihres Alltags vor dem Hintergrund ihres Glaubens. Der zweite Film dokumentiert die Höhepunkte islamischer Kunst und Architektur im Sultanat Oman.

Sultanat Oman präsentiert sich

In die märchenhafte Welt des Seefahrers Sindbad und des alten Seefahrervolks der Omanis führt die Ausstellung „Religiöse Toleranz – Der Islam im Sultanat Oman“. Noch bis zum 14. Mai ist sie in der Volkshochschule (VHS) zu sehen. 20 Informationstafeln geben einen Einblick in den Islam in der modernen arabischen Gesellschaft. Dabei wird nicht nur ein besonderer Wert auf den Koran gelegt, sondern auch die Rolle der Frau erläutert.

„Das Sultanat Oman feiert in diesem Jahr 40 Jahre Renaissance. Unter der Führung des Sultans Qabus ist ihm eine beeindruckende Entwicklung gelungen, Moderne und Tradition miteinander zu verbinden und sich den neuen Anforderungen zu stellen. Oman ist ein modernes und zugleich traditionsbewusstes Land“, sagte Sozialdezernent Wolfgang van Vliet.

Nicht nur die Wanderausstellung startete in Ludwigshafen, auch ein Dokumentarfilm des Grimme-Preisträgers Wolfgang Ettlich wurde erstmals gezeigt. Georg Popp, Generalsekretär der deutsch-osmanischen Gesellschaft, dankte der VHS. Die Ausstellung erfolgte auf Initiative des Ministeriums für religiöse Stiftungen und Religionsangelegenheiten. Zur Eröffnung kamen auch Vertreter der omanischen Botschaft.

Von Vorurteilen und Frauenwahlrecht

Wanderausstellung in Volkshochschule befasst sich mit religiöser Toleranz im Sultanat Oman

Nach der stark besuchten Fotoausstellung „Sultanat Oman“ vor dreieinhalb Jahren ist am Freitag als Deutschland-Premiere eine Wanderausstellung über das arabische Land in der Volkshochschule (VHS) eröffnet worden. Dabei erstmals zu sehen: ein Dokumentarfilm über das Sultanat an der Südspitze der arabischen Halbinsel.

Bei der Eröffnung der Ausstellung „Religiöse Toleranz – Der Islam im Sultanat Oman“ wurden die Worte Mohammad Al-Mamari aus dem Religionsministerium Omans vom Gemeindeführer begleitet. Der erste Blick auf die Straßen seines Heimatlandes, sagte Al-Mamari, bestätige Vorurteile gegenüber islamischen Ländern. Das Straßenbild werde von Männern beherrscht, während die Frauen „zu Hause bestinliche Entscheidungen treffen“. Die Preview des Films von Wolfgang Ettlich machte es dann aber wahrscheinlich, dass die Erklärung nicht die Umkehrung der Frauen benachteiligt sollte. Frauen berichteten vor der Kamera, dass sie das Wahlrecht besitzen und frei in der Wahl des Berufs und des Ehepartners seien. In der Regierung seien drei Ministerinnen vertreten.

In den voll besetzten Vortragssaal der Volkshochschule waren zur Eröffnung allein 30 der 80 derzeit in Deutschland studierenden Omanis gekommen. Sozialdezernent Wolfgang van Vliet lobte die in dem islamischen Land geübte Toleranz gegenüber anderen Religionen.

Die Ausstellung zeichnet auf Informationstafeln den Weg zu dieser Praxis nach. Als Dreischaubild des Seeräubers am Indischen Ozean – die Sagen von Sindbad geben auf omanische Erzählungen zurück – ist das Land seit jeher offen für andere Völker und Sitten. Bei der Islamisierung im Jahr 750 orientierte sich Oman an der islamischen (halbinsel) Rechtschule und Koexistenzpolitik. Sultan Qabus bin Said Al-Said, seit 1970 Herrscher, machte aus Oman, zureich eine der reichsten Nationen der Welt, mit den Einnahmen aus dem Erdöl- und Erdgasexport ein an Schulen und Krankenhäusern reiches Land.

TERMIN

Zu sehen bis 14. Mai. Am 18. Juni, 19.30 Uhr, gibt der Gemeindeführer der deutsch-osmanischen Gesellschaft, Georg Popp, in der VHS den Vortrag „Das Sultanat Oman im Spannungsfeld zwischen Tradition und Moderne“. (34)

AUSSTELLUNG UND FILME VON GRIMME-PREIS-TRÄGER ETTLICH ZUERST IN DER VHS

PREMIERE IN DER VOLKSHOCHSCHULE LUDWIGSHAFEN: ZUM ERSTEN MAL ÜBERHAUPT WERDEN UNTER DEM THEMA „RELIGIÖSE TOLERANZ – DER ISLAM IM SULTANAT OMAN“ EINE AUSSTELLUNG UND ZWEI DOKUMENTARFILME DES GRIMME-PREIS-TRÄGERS WOLFGANG ETTLICH GEZEIGT. ERÖFFNET WIRD DIE AUSSTELLUNG AM 16. APRIL, 19 UHR, VON SOZIALDEZERNENT WOLFGANG VAN VLIET UND DER OMANISCHEN BOTSCHAFTERIN DR. ZAINAB BINT ALI BIN SAID AL QASMIYAH.

Die Ausstellung, die bis zum 14. Mai in der Volkshochschule zu sehen ist, demonstriert die Verbindung von Islam und einer liberalen Haltung gegenüber unterschiedlichen islamischen Richtungen und anderen Religionen. Auf 20 Informationstafeln werden Themen angesprochen, wie das Nebeneinander-Bestehen verschiedener Religionsgemeinschaften, der gelebte Islam im Alltag sowie die Rolle der Frau. Darüber hinaus vermittelt sie den besonderen Wert des Heiligen Buches der Muslime – des Koran.

Als „einen besonderen Höhepunkt des VHS-Programms in diesem Semester“, wertet Sozialdezernent Wolfgang van Vliet die Premiere der Ausstellung und der Dokumentarfilme über den „Islam im Sultanat Oman“ in Ludwigshafen. „Dass diese Veranstaltung zuerst in der VHS stattfindet, ist ein weiteres Indiz dafür, dass sich unser Weiterbildungszentrum in den vergangenen Jahren im hohen Maße profiliert hat und weit über die Stadt hinaus Anerkennung genießt“, zeigt sich der Beigeordnete zufrieden mit der Entwicklung der VHS. „Nach dem großen Erfolg der Fotoausstellung „Sultanat Oman“ im November 2006 mit über 1.100 Besucherinnen und Besuchern sind wir stolz darauf, dass der Generalsekretär der deutsch-omanischen Gesellschaft, Georg Popp, mit dieser Ausstellung zuerst auf die Volkshochschule Ludwigshafen zugekommen ist“, ergänzt Sabine Heiligenthal, Leiterin der Volkshochschule.

jekt auch nur ähnlich viel Engagement gezeigt, wie die VHS Ludwigshafen“, erklärt Generalsekretär Georg Popp.

Die Darstellung über das Sultanat beruht auf einer tatsächlich in Oman gelebten Gesellschaftskultur. Neben den informativen Ausstellungstafeln sind Repliken von alten Schriften und Koranen, Suren auf den Schulterknochen von Kamelen und anderes Bildmaterial zu sehen. Der Dokumentarfilmer und Grimme-Preissträger Wolfgang Etllich drehte begleitend zur Ausstellung zwei halbstündige Filme, die im Rahmen der Veranstaltung gezeigt werden. Der erste Film beobachtet das Leben der verschiedenen islamischen und nicht-islamischen Bevölkerungsgruppen im Oman und die Ausgestaltung ihres Alltags vor dem Hintergrund ihres Glaubens. Der zweite Film dokumentiert die Höhepunkte islamischer Kunst und Architektur im Sultanat Oman.

Das Sultanat Oman – ein modernes und zugleich islamisch-traditionsbewusstes Land auf der arabischen Halbinsel – pflegt besondere Beziehungen zur Bundesrepublik Deutschland. Die Ausstellung erfolgt auf Initiative des Ministeriums für religiöse Stiftungen und Religionsangelegenheiten des Sultanats Oman (Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs of the Sultanate of Oman). Für die Inhalte der Ausstellung zeichnet ebenfalls dieses Ministerium verantwortlich. Ziel ist es, einen Beitrag zum besseren Verständnis der unterschiedlichen Kulturen und Sichtweisen zu liefern.

Eine begleitende Informationsbroschüre zur Ausstellung erhalten die Besucherinnen und Besucher kostenlos. Geplant ist, die Ausstellung danach in Offenburg, Duisburg, Berlin, Nürnberg und Dortmund zu zeigen.

Besichtigt werden kann die Ausstellung in der VHS, Im Bürgerhof, von Montag bis Freitag, 9 bis 20 Uhr. tim

AUSSTELLUNG Aufschlussreiche Einblicke in die Glaubenswelt der Ibadhīs

Der kleine Knochen in der Vitrine zieht sofort unsere Aufmerksamkeit auf sich. Umgeben ist er von Bildern der Sand- und Kieswüste. „Teil einer Kamelschulter“ steht dazu in der Ausstellungsbeschreibung. Man denkt an endlose Karawanen, grüne Oasen und florierenden Weibrauchhandel. Oder es steigen Erinnerungen auf an Sindbad, den Seefahrer oder Hadshi Halef Omar aus der Welt Karl Mays. Tatsächlich führt uns die aktuelle Ausstellung im Dortmunder Reinoldinum in das Morgenland. Es geht um das in Deutschland weithin unbekannt Sultanat Oman. Das liegt in dem alten Kulturland, wo der Persische Golf in den indischen Ozean strömt. Oman ist heute ein modernes und zugleich islamisch-traditionsbewusstes Land.

Auf die Tradition verweisen die rhythmischen Striche und Linien auf dem Kamelknochen. Es handelt sich um arabische Schriftzeichen – so viel ist erkennbar. Alte Weisheiten des Koran sind dort erhalten, die seit fast 1400 Jahren die Kultur dieses fernen Landes prägen. Denn der Islam erreichte Oman bereits acht Jahre nach der Auswanderung des Propheten Mohammed nach Medina und damit dem Beginn der islamischen Zeitrechnung.

Farida (M.) und Nadaira (r.) arbeiten in einem Zentrum für Beduininnen in Oman. FOTO: SABINE PREUSS

Das Besondere bis heute: Die Mehrheit der Bevölkerung Omans sind weder Schiiten noch Sunniten. Oman ist stattdessen geprägt von Ibadhīs, einer selbstständigen islamischen Glaubensrichtung, die in der westlichen wie auch arabischen Welt kaum bekannt ist. Die Philosophie der Ibadhīs beruht auf dem Grundsatz der religiösen Toleranz und der Vermeidung von Konflikten und Gewalt. Deshalb lebten in Oman auch schon immer Juden, Christen und Hindus – und so ist es auch noch heute.

Wer sich Zeit nimmt, erfährt: Missionarische Aktivitäten sind grundsätzlich allen Religionsgemeinschaften im Sultanat untersagt. Das gilt ausdrücklich auch gegenüber den Moscheen. Das gemeinschaftliche Gebet zu Gott kennt keine theologische alleine regiert? Auf diese Fragen gibt die Ausstellung selber leider keine Antworten.

Eine Idee könnte aber jener Knochen geben, der direkt zu Beginn in den Blick geraten war: Es handelt sich hier nicht etwa um einen heiligen Text zum Vorlesen, sondern um eine Schreib- bzw. Lesetübung. Mit dem heiligen Text lernt ein Mensch gerade das Schreiben und Lesen. Und übt offenbar auch fleißig damit. Die Religion verhalf ihm dazu, sich Bildung zu verschaffen und auf diese Weise Toleranz zu lernen. Der Kamel-Schulter-Knochen war das Unterrichtsmaterial, welches die Wüste kostenlos zur Verfügung stellte. Buch und Heft der Beduinen also.

Es war leider nicht zu ermitteln, welchen Koranspruch er oder sie dort zur Übung niederschrieb. Vielleicht war es aus Sure 49: „Ob ihr Menschen. Wir haben euch als Mann und Frau erschaffen und zu Völkern und Stämmen gemacht, auf dass ihr einander kenntlernt.“ EBW-SPGGE

Religiöse Toleranz im Oman

Oman's Botschafterin I. E. Dr. Zainab Al-Qasbiyah

Vor vierzig Jahren übernahm Sultan Qaboos bin Said Al Said die Regierung im Oman. Eines der Kennzeichen des Landes ist dessen religiöse Toleranz. Neben den verschiedenen islamischen Glaubensrichtungen leben im Oman auch Juden, Christen, Hindus und Zoroastren. Begründet ist diese religiöse Toleranz im Bekenntnis der Mehrheit der Omanis zur Ibadhiyah, einer wenig bekannten Rechtsschule des Islam. Begründet wurde sie 93 n. H. (711 n. Chr.) durch Jabir bin Zayd und durch seinen Mitstreiter Abdullah ibn Ibadh nach außen vertreten. Religiöse Toleranz und die Vermeidung von Konflikten sind

Grundsätze der ibadhiischen Philosophie. Nach ihrer Meinung müssen islamische Glaubensprinzipien immer wieder im sich wandelnden kulturellen und historischen Zusammenhang überdacht werden, damit der Islam seine ursprüngliche Kraft und Aktualität bewahrt. Die Erläuterung dieser Prinzipien ist die Aufgabe der Wanderausstellung 'Religiöse Toleranz - Der Islam im Sultanat Oman'. Zusammen mit Erwachsenenbildungseinrichtungen in Deutschland führt sie das omanische 'Ministerium für religiöse Stiftungen und Religionsangelegenheiten' bis Ende 2011 in verschiedenen deutschen Städten durch. Bislang wurde die Ausstellung in Ludwigs-hafen, Offenburg, Dortmund und München gezeigt. Nächste Station ist vom 12. bis 30. November Hof, Nordhorn, Wilhelmshaven, Aachen, Hamburg, Wuppertal und weitere Orte stehen für das Frühjahr 2011 auf dem Programm. Weitere Orte folgen. Zur Eröffnung in der Bayerischen Landeshauptstadt am 24. September waren der stellvertretende Minister für Religiöse Stiftungen und Religionsangelegenheiten, S. E. Sheikh Ahmed bin Saud Al-Syabi und die Botschafterin Omans anwesend, I. E. Dr. Zainab Ali Said Al-Qasbiyah. Ebenso sprach Münchens Bürgermeister Hep Montaxeder zu den Gästen im Kulturzentrum Gasteig.  Mehr Informationen: www.religioese-toleranz.de Wenn in Deutschland über den Bau einer Moschee gestritten wird, dann betonen Gegner des Projekts gerne, in der Türkei oder anderen islamischen Ländern herrsche ja auch eine ablehnende Haltung gegenüber der Errichtung von Kirchen. Die Realität ist vielfältiger und als Gegenbeispiel präsentiert sich der Oman: Die Ausstellung „Religiöse Toleranz – Der Islam im Sultanat Oman“, die diesen Freitagabend im Gasteig eröffnet wird, zeigt, dass dort der Staat die freie Religionsausübung erlaubt und es neben Kirchen auch Tempel für Hindus und Buddhisten gibt. Auch Repliken von alten Koranschriften und Suren auf Kamelschulterknochen werden zu sehen sein. Das Jahr 2010 steht unter dem Motto "Annäherung" der Kulturen". Eine wichtige Grundlage für diese Annäherung von Menschen aus verschiedenen Religionen und Kulturen ist religiöse Toleranz und interkulturelle Verständigung. Die VHS Landkreis Hof hat ein ganzes Wochenende unter dieses Motto gestellt hat. Vom 11. bis 13. November bietet sie ein vielfältiges Programm.

Los geht es am Donnerstag, 11. November, um 19 Uhr mit der Autorenlesung von Lea Fleischmann (siehe auch unten) im Gemeindehaus St. Lorenz in Hof. Fleischmann, die 1979 nach Jerusalem ausgewandert, ist eine authentische Vermittlerin der israelitischen Kultur und der jüdischen Religion. In ihrem Buch "Heiliges Essen" aus der Reihe "Das Judentum für Nichtjuden verständlich gemacht" erläutert sie die Bedeutung der biblischen Speisegebote. Im Anschluss haben die Zuhörer die Möglichkeit, Fragen zu stellen. Die Lesung findet in Kooperation mit dem Freundeskreis der Evangelischen Akademie Tutzing und dem Evangelischen Erwachsenenbildungswerk Hof statt.

Vom 12. November bis zum 1. Dezember ist die Ausstellung "Religiöse Toleranz - der Islam im Sultanat Oman" im VHS Bildungszentrum in der Fabrikzeile 21 (Textilgruppe) zu sehen. Der Besucher erlebt eine Bilder- und Informationsreise durch das Sultanat Oman. Hier leben überwiegend Menschen mit muslimischer Religionszugehörigkeit, gleichzeitig aber seit Jahrhunderten auch Angehörige anderer Religionen wie Juden, Christen oder Hindus.

Die Bilder und Exponate der Ausstellung geben Einblicke in die tatsächlich gelebte Kultur und Gesellschaft des Oman, und sie zeigen, wie ein islamisches, liberales Land organisiert ist. Der Dokumentarfilmer und Grimme-Preis-Träger Wolfgang Ettlch hat begleitend zur Ausstellung einen halbstündigen Film mit dem Titel "Religiöse Toleranz in Oman" gedreht, der im Rahmen der Ausstellung gesehen werden kann. Ein Besuch ist nach Voranmeldung werktags in der Zeit von 9 bis 17 Uhr möglich.

Interkulturelles Wochenende an der VHS Landkreis Hof

Im Rahmen des traditionellen Fests der Kulturen der VHS Landkreis Hof wird die Ausstellung am Freitag, 12. November, um 9.30 Uhr feierlich eröffnet. Georg Popp, Generalsekretär der deutsch-omanischen Gesellschaft, führt in einem Eröffnungsvortrag in die Ausstellung ein und vermittelt Hintergrundinformationen über das Leben und den Alltag im Oman. Umrahmt wird die feierliche Eröffnung der Ausstellung vom traditionellen Fest der Kulturen. Mitveranstalter und Kooperationspartner des diesjährigen Fests der Kulturen ist die Regierung von Oberfranken. Kursteilnehmer der VHS aus verschiedenen Nationen bereichern das Fest der Kulturen mit einem interkulturellen Programm und einem abschließenden multikulturellen Buffet, das Gelegenheit zu interkultureller Begegnung und Gesprächsaustausch bietet.

Abgerundet wird das Wochenende von zwei Seminaren zu den Themen "Die großen Weltreligionen" am Freitag, 12. November, von 14 bis 17 Uhr und "Interkulturelle Kommunikation erfolgreich gestalten" am Samstag, 13. November, von 9.30 bis 16 Uhr. Nähere Auskünfte dazu gibt es in der VHS Landkreis Hof bei Jenny Strobel unter 09281/7145-21. Hier kann man sich auch für die Seminare anmelden.

Interkulturelles Wochenende der VHS Landkreis Hof: Lesung, Ausstellung und Fest der Kulturen

HOF ■ Das Jahr 2010 steht unter dem Motto „Annäherung der Kulturen“. Eine wichtige Grundlage für diese Annäherung von Menschen aus verschiedenen Religionen und Kulturen ist religiöse Toleranz und interkulturelle Verständigung. Die VHS Landkreis Hof hat deshalb ein ganzes Wochenende unter dieses Motto gestellt. Vom 11. bis 13. November bietet sie ein vielfältiges Programm.

Los geht es am morgigen Donnerstag, 11. November, um 19 Uhr mit der Autorenlesung von Lea Fleischmann im Gemeindehaus St. Lorenz in Hof. Fleischmann, die 1979 nach Jerusalem ausgewanderte, ist eine authentische Vermittlerin der israelitischen Kultur und der jüdischen Religion. In ihrem Buch „Heiliges Essen“ aus der Reihe „Das Judentum für Nichtjuden verständlich gemacht“ erläutert sie die Bedeutung der biblischen Speisegebote. Im Anschluss an die Lesung haben die Zuhörer die Möglichkeit, Fragen zu stellen. Die Lesung findet in Kooperation mit dem Freundeskreis der Evangelischen Akademie Tutzing und dem Evangelischen Erwachsenenbildungswerk Hof statt.

Abgerundet wird das Wochenende von zwei Seminaren. Unter dem Motto „Die großen Weltreligionen“ erfährt man am Freitag, 12. November, von 14 bis 17 Uhr, wie die Religionen entstanden sind und welche Regeln ihnen zugrunde liegen. Bei „Interkulturelle Kommunikation erfolgreich gestalten“ am Samstag, 13. November, von 9.30 bis 16 Uhr, geht es um die Sensibilisierung für kulturelle Unterschiede. Im Bereich Kommunikation, Teamarbeit, Rangordnungsverständnis, Beziehungsgestaltung, Zeitmanagement oder im Problemlösungsverhalten gibt es große Unterschiede, die leicht zu Konflikten führen können. Religiöse Toleranz in Wort und Bild Die VHS Landkreis Hof tritt zur Veranstaltungsreihe unter dem Motto „Annäherung der Kulturen“. Mittelpunkt ist eine Ausstellung, die das Leben und den Glauben in Oman zum Inhalt hat.

Hof – Unter dem Motto „Religiöse Toleranz und Annäherung der Kulturen“ finden im Zeitraum vom 11. bis 13. November an der VHS Landkreis Hof verschiedene Veranstaltungen statt: Eine Autorenlesung zum Thema „Koscheres Essen“ im Judentum, das traditionelle Fest der Kulturen der VHS mit Kursteilnehmern aus verschiedenen Nationen, eine interkulturelle Fortbildung zum Thema „Die großen Weltreligionen“ und eine mit dem Inhalt der „Interkulturellen Kommunikation“ stehen auf dem Veranstaltungskalender.

Dazu gibt es auch eine Ausstellung unter dem Titel „Religiöse Toleranz – Der Islam im Sultanat Oman“. Diese Wanderausstellung ist in diesem Jahr erstmals in Deutschland zu sehen. Bisher war sie in größeren Städten wie Ludwigshafen, Offenburg, Dortmund, München zu sehen. Die Ausstellung wird vom 12. November bis zum 1. Dezember im Bildungszentrum der VHS Landkreis Hof, Fabrikzeile 21, zu sehen sein. Ein Besuch ist nach Voranmeldung in der Zeit von 9 bis 17 Uhr möglich.

Die Vernissage findet am Freitag um 9.30 in der VHS statt. Den Einführungsvortrag hält Georg Popp, der Generalsekretär der deutsch-omanischen Gesellschaft. Ebenfalls anwesend sein wird der Grimme-Preis-Träger Wolfgang Ettlisch, der begleitend zur Ausstellung einen Film gedreht hat. Der Film wird bei der Ausstellungsöffnung ebenfalls gezeigt. Womöglich wird auch der Botschafter des Sultanats Oman zur Eröffnung der Ausstellung kommen, schreibt die VHS.

Die Ausstellung versteht sich als Beitrag zum friedlichen Dialog der Kulturen und der Religionen. Der Besucher erlebt eine „Bilder- und Informationsreise“ durch das Sultanat Oman. Hier leben überwiegend Menschen mit islamischer Religions-zugehörigkeit, gleichzeitig aber seit Jahrhunderten auch Angehörige anderer Religionen, wie Juden, Christen oder Hindus. Das Zusammenleben ist geprägt von religiöser Toleranz, die im Sultanat Oman sehr offen gelebt und praktiziert wird. So zeigt diese Ausstellung auch auf eindrucksvolle Weise, wie gut das Zu-

Vorbereitet hat die Ausstellung das Ministerium für religiöse Stiftungen und Religionsangelegenheiten des Sultanats Oman.

Die Bilder und Exponate der Ausstellung geben laut Mitteilung Einblicke in die tatsächlich gelebte Kultur und Gesellschaft des Oman und sie zeigen, wie ein islamisches, liberales Land organisiert ist. Gleichzeitig möchte die Ausstellung auch informieren über den gelebten Islam im Alltag des Oman und bei Festen; auch geht es um die Rolle der Frau im Islam, um mögliche Vorurteile gegenüber dem Islam und dem friedlichen Dialog der Religionen.

Männerquote an der Universität

AUSSTELLUNG Geschäftsführer der Deutsch-omanischen Gesellschaft referierte

WILHELMSHAVEN /Ir „Der Islam im Sultanat Oman“ ist der Untertitel der informativen Ausstellung, die von Oberbürgermeister Eberhard Menzel und dem Iman Mustafa Kaplan eröffnet wurde. Der Geschäftsführer der Deutsch-omanischen Gesellschaft, Georg Popp, war extra aus München gekommen, um den zahlreichen interessierten Bürgern einen Einblick in die jüngste Geschichte des Sultanats zu geben. Religiöse Toleranz war laut Popp schon vor dem Amtsantritt des jetzigen Sultans ein Merkmal des bis dahin mittelalterlich anmutenden Staates. Bildung für alle, Männer wie Frauen, Muslime ebenso wie Christen und Buddhisten war und ist das Rezept, das helfen soll, den Staat in die Moderne zu führen, erklärte Popp. Inzwischen liege die Alphabetisierungsquote der jungen und mittleren Generation mit der in Deutschland auf Augenhöhe. An der Universität musste eine Männerquote eingeführt werden und der Anteil von Frauen in Führungspositionen ist deutlich höher als in Deutschland – auch die omanische Botschaft in Berlin wird von einer promovierten Frau geleitet. Neben der Bildung werde auch in großem Umfang in die Infrastruktur investiert – wer sich das heutige Verkehrsnetz ansehe, könne sich kaum vorstellen, dass es vor 40 Jahren gerade einmal zehn Kilometer asphaltierte Straße im ganzen Staat gab. Auch städtebaulich habe sich viel getan. Besonders beeindruckend: die große Moschee und die Neukonzeption der zentralen Städte. Die Ausstellung umfasst 20 informative Tafeln und eine Reihe interessanter Exponate wie beispielsweise einer Replik eines aufwendig gestalteten Korans. Außerdem liegt eine Begleitbroschüre aus und Gruppen und Schulklassen haben die Möglichkeit, einen Film zum Thema religiöse Toleranz anzusehen (Anmeldung unter Tel. 16 40 00). Die Ausstellung in der ersten Etage des Hans-Beutz-Hauses kann montags bis freitags von 8 bis 21 Uhr und sonnabends von 11 bis 17 Uhr besucht werden.

„Religiöse Toleranz – der Islam im Sultanat Oman“

GW Nordhorn. Staaten, in denen überwiegend Menschen mit islamischer Religionszugehörigkeit leben, haben im Lauf der Jahrhunderte unterschiedliche Entwicklungen und Ausformungen erlebt. Der Islam im Oman ist geprägt vom frühen islamischen Zweig der Ibaditen. Es ist ein Islam, der so gar nicht in viele Vorurteile passt; ob es nun um religiöse Toleranz oder die Rolle der Frau im Islam geht. Das Sultanat Oman ist ein Beispiel für einen liberalen Umgang mit der Religion.

Die Ausstellung „Religiöse Vielfalt – der Islam im Sultanat Oman“ ist die erste Veranstaltung unter dem Semester motto der VHS „Der Vielfalt ein Gesicht geben“. Um eine Vorstellung von der Vielfalt und den unterschiedlichen Ausprägungen des Islam zu bekommen, stellt die VHS bis Mitte Februar als Beispiel den Islam im Sultanat Oman mit

افتتاح معرض التسامح الديني في مدينة تاراجونا الإسبانية

السيابي يلقي كلمته

جولة داخل المعرض

السيابي: المعرض يرسخ التوجهات السامية بأن يكون للسلطنة وجود في حوار الحضارات والثقافات والأديان أنا أرديضول : إرساء التفاهم الفعلي بين الشعوب وترسيخ التبادل الفكري

والجامعيين من الجهتين. وأكدت الدكتورة أنا أرديضول نائبة عميد جامعة روفيرا فيرجيللي بأن هذا المعرض الفريد من نوعه يرسم الطريق الذي نبدا منه وننقدم فيه لمعرفة قيم مهمة على المستوى الدولي حيث يساهم في إرساء التفاهم الفعلي بين الشعوب ويشجع على التبادل الفكري بين الثقافات وهي الأهداف التي يصبو إليها منظمو هذا المعرض. وأوضحت أن هذا المعرض سيحقق المعرفة التي هي القاعدة الأساسية للتطور التكنولوجي والقيم الواضح لمختلف الثقافات والحضارات وهي الوقت نفسه إرساء قيم الاحترام فضلا على أن هذا المعرض إضافة لتحقيق هذه الأهداف السامية سيساهم في تبادل الخبرات بين الجامعات وفي ختام كلمتها شكرت وزارة الأوقاف والشؤون الدينية على إقامة هذا المعرض.

كما ألقى إريك أوليفي رئيس قسم اليونسكو للحوار بين الثقافات في البحر الأبيض المتوسط والمشرف على المعرض كلمة أوضح من خلالها الدور الذي يلعبه قسم اليونسكو في إرساء الحوار ومد جسور التسامح والتفاهم والتعايش السلمي ثم نوه إلى أهمية منطقة البحر الأبيض المتوسط لتحقيق الأهداف التي ذكرها سابقا ثم أشاد بالدور الذي تلعبه سلطنة عمان في منطقة الخليج في مجال الحوار وإرساء التسامح الديني بين الشعوب في ختام كلمته أعرب عن جزيل الشكر للسلطنة لإعطاء الفرصة للطلبة في أسبانيا لمعرفة الإسلام الحقيقي والسلمي مؤكدا أن الحوار هو السبيل لتعرف على الثقافات والحضارات الأخرى مشيرا إلى أن إقامة مثل هذه المعارض تشكل نقطة الانطلاق للمضي قدما في مبادرات تساهم في تعزيز التبادل العلمي والأكاديمي بين الأساتذة

افتتاح «معرض التسامح الديني» بمدينة نورنبرج الألمانية

الأمين العام بمكتب الإفتاء خلال رعايته افتتاح معرض التسامح الديني في عمان

سلسلة من المعارض التي تهدف إلى تعريف بالتسامح في الإسلام في عدد من الدول وقد كان لجمهورية ألمانيا الاتحادية التصيب الأكبر منها نظراً لعلاقة الصداقة والتعاون بين البلدين ولا شك أن لترحيب المسؤولين الألمان والجمهور الألماني بهذه المعارض أثره الطيب الذي جعل سلطنة عمان تعضي قدماً في إقامتها. وأشار سعادته إلى أن إقامة هذا المعرض يعكس إلى حد كبير توجه السلطنة إلى التعريف بالإسلام ومدى التسامح الذي ينطوي عليه وهو يترجم توجيهات عاهل البلاد المفدى حضرة صاحب الجلالة السلطان قابوس بن سعيد المعظم. حفظه الله. وذكر سعادته في ختام كلمته أن الممارسات العنيفة التي يقوم بها بعض المسلمين من هنا وهناك لا تعبر عن الإسلام وليس هي من الإسلام في شيء وإنما هي تسيء إلى الإسلام

JEQUE AHMAD BIN SAUD AL SIYABI ■ SECRETARIO G. DEL MINISTERIO DE ASUNTOS RELIGIOSOS DEL SULTANATO DE OMÁN

PER M. VICTÒRIA BERTRAN

¿Qué religiones hay en Omán aparte de la musulmana?

¿Por qué justo ahora organiza Omán esta exposición?

¿Para mostrarse como una sociedad árabe moderna? Con la exposición lo que pretendemos es mostrar a la gente que la religión del Islam no tiene nada que ver con la violencia ni con el terrorismo.

¿En qué ha avanzado Omán?

¿Pueden votar las mujeres, o pasa como en Arabia Saudí?

La mujer omaní tiene más derechos que la mujer saudita. Tie-

¿Preocupa en Omán la situación de inestabilidad de su vecino Yemen?

La población yemení está perfectamente capacitada para so-

Exposición sobre el Islam en la URV

■ ‘Tolerancia religiosa. El Islam en el Sultanato de Omán’ es el título de la muestra instalada en el vestíbulo del Centre de Recursos per a l’Aprenentatge i la Investigació (CRAI) del campus Catalunya. Organizada por el Gobierno omaní, llega a la URV de la mano de la Càtedra Unesco de Diàleg Inter-cultural a la Mediterrània y podrá visitarse hasta el 21 de octubre. Su principal objetivo es acercar el Islam al público y dar una visión de Omán como sociedad árabe moderna.

No es nada positivo para el mundo musulmán que la gente muera, ni que los musulmanes se maten entre sí. Esperamos que la situación vuelva a la calma pronto en todos los países.

¿No cree que, pese a las muertes, siempre lamentables, habrá cambios positivos?

Religious tolerance hailed

BARCELONA — An exhibition titled “Religious Tolerance in Oman” was opened here yesterday under the auspices of Shaikh Ahmed bin Saud al Siyabi, Secretary-General of the Ifta Office, in the presence of Shaikh Hilal bin Salim al Maamari, Sultanate’s Ambassador to Spain.

Al Siyabi said that His Majesty Sultan Qaboos accorded special importance to religious tolerance, making the Sultanate an oasis of tolerance among religious, ethnic and cultural groups, a fact testified and commended by international reports.

“This is not a strange thing in an Arab and Islamic country, like Oman, which derived its humanitarian approach from Islam’s call for activating ethical and social values, including tolerance with non-Islamic groups,” said Al Siyabi.

Al Siyabi pointed out that Omanis communicated in full transparency with all those who resided in the Sultanate’s lands, offering them security and comfort in practising their religious rites. There is historical evidence that Omani religious scholars exchanged visits with people who belonged to other religions and respected them, Al Siyabi added.

Speeches on the occasion focused on the need to promote shared values among people with different religions. They encouraged co-operation and peaceful co-existence and they stressed the importance of curbing clashes and violence.

The speakers said over the years, the image of Islam was tarnished by some sections of the media which tried to manipulate public opinion and its time to portray true values of Islam. — ONA (See also P2)

Ausstellung über das Sultanat Oman im Haus Nordhelle offiziell eröffnet / Alex Moll berichtet über ein außergewöhnliches Land

Von Petra Schäfer

WILHELM • Im Sultanat Oman dürfen Christen Kirchen bauen, Hindus ihre Gottheiten Shiva oder Vishnu verehren und jüdische Rabbinen ihre Gemeinden leiten. Das kleine Land auf der arabischen Halbinsel scheint manch einem gar wie eine Insel der Glückseligen. Und das, obwohl Oman mit dem Jemen, Saudi-Arabien und dem Iran gemeinsame Nachbarn hat.

Auch im Oman ist der Islam die Staatsreligion und die Scharia das gültige Rechtssystem. „Gewalt ist hier jedoch äußerst selten“, erklärt der Oman-Kenner Alex Moll. Die Omanis beherrschen eine Kunst, die anderenorts eher selten zu finden sei: „Sie können die anderen sein lassen, sitzen sich selbst zu versieren.“ Warum das so ist, und wie es kommt, dass das Land seit Jahrzehnten praktisch geruhet, das erklärte Moll am Donnerstag im Haus Nordhelle. Er eröffnete die Ausstellung „Religiöse Toleranz“ • Der Sultan im Sultanat Oman“, die noch bis zum 9. Februar zu sehen ist und auf zwei Tausend Schautafeln über den geliebten Islam im Alltag, die Rolle der Frau und den Kampf informiert.

„Wegen Sie so werden, sind die Omanis die Holländer unter den Arabern“, erklärte der Referent. Das Land sei eine alte Festbefestigung und daher ausgesprochen liberal. Schon im 8. Jahrhundert wählten Omanis bis nach China, wo sie Damaskus gegen Perser und Seldschuken trübten. Der Kontakt zu anderen Kulturen schuf schon früh ein Klima der Toleranz. Die Omanis hätten zudem die schwarze Glorie, seit 90 Jahren von einem „weisen Erbsenregenten Mulla“ regiert zu werden, dem es tatsächlich um das Wohl des Landes gehe. In der Sultan Qaboos 1970 die Macht übernahm, habe sich Oman von einem der rückständigsten Länder der Welt zu einem modernen Staat mit ausgeprägter Infrastruktur entwickelt. Wie groß die Veränderung ist, lässt sich beispielhaft an der Zahl der Schulen erkennen: Gab es nur fünf der Machtergreifung des Sultans gerade einmal drei Grundschulen, so verfügte im Jahr 2010 schon über 1000 Schulen, eine staatliche und zwölf private Universitäten. Frauen leben hier ein selbstbestimmtes Leben. Sie erwerbstätig, wenn sie heiraten. Sie studieren und bekleiden sogar Ministerien. „Da die Zahl der weiblichen Studenten stetig steigt, sah sich der Sultan so gar gezwungen, eine Minderquote von 50 Prozent einzuführen“, berichtete Moll am Donnerstag amnisiert. Eine großer Liberalität lebten die Studenten im Oman, nach streng konservativen Grundsätzen, erklärte er.

Moll, der die Wanderausstellung als Mitglied des Deutschen Kultur der deutsch-omanischen Gesellschaft begleitet, zeigte am Donnerstag auch einen Dokumentarfilm über die Land. Nach der Veranstaltung hatten die rund 20 Besucher viele weitere Fragen. Moll gab interessante Einblicke und berichtete etwa, dass der Oman weltweit das Land mit dem höchsten Pro-Kopf-Einkommen für die Bildung sei. „Der Oman ist nicht ein bisschen“, begründete er. „Sie wissen, dass sie sich neben ihren ungenießlichen Nachbarn behaupten müssen.“ Der Referent wies mit 2005 viele Male in das Land und im spärlich angelegten von der Nation: „Ein so buntes Volk wie dort habe ich noch nirgendwo angetroffen.“, erklärte er. Doch obwohl 30 Prozent der Bevölkerung Ausländer seien, gebe es keine rassistischen Kräfte. Weitere Informationen hätten eine ansprechend gestaltete Broschüre und eine DVD mit dem Dokumentarfilm. Beide liegen noch bis zum 9. Februar begleitend zur Ausstellung aus.

وقد اكتسب من خلال هذه التجربة علاقات طيبة
مع مؤسسات عالمية ومحلية تشارك السلطنة هدف
المعرض ورسالته معتبراً ان مدينة مدريد العريقة
تعد مثالا للتعايش والتسامح بين مختلف الأديان
والثقافات.
بعد ذلك ألقى داماسو لويس رئيس جامعة كيمولوتسي
بمديرية كلمة أشاد خلالها بالتسامح الديني الذي
تشهده السلطنة واحترامها للأديان والعقائد بها مؤكداً
ان السلطنة تمثل لاسبانيا مرجعية هامة للتسامح
الديني والإصلاح الهادي.
وأشار لويس إلى انه كان للسلطنة ولا يزال دور بارز
في نشر الدين الإسلامي في شرق أفريقيا وغرب آسيا
ولهذا فإن مثل هذا النشاط والفعاليات ليس بغريب
عليها. ولأن العمانيين سيقفوا إلى نشر الإسلام عبر

أحمد السيابي : موقع السلطنة المميز جعل العمانيين يتعايشون مع شعوب وأمم مختلفة في أديانها وأعراقها وألوانها وثقافتها

• أحمد السيابي يلقى كلمته

• راعي المناسبة والحضور خلال الحفل

قابوس بن سعيد المعظم، حفظه الله ورعا، بإنشاء كرسي علمية فيها، وأضاف المعمرى: إن المعارض في دوراتها السابقة قد حققت ولله الحمد إيلا كبيرا ونتائج مرضية حيث وصل عدد المطعنين عليها والقائمين لفعاليتها إلى أكثر من تسلاسة مسلاين زائرا. إضافة إلى عشرات الدعوات التي تقدمت بها مؤسسات رسمية ومدنية لاحتضان المعرض مسجلين إعجابهم بتجربة التسامح الديني في السلطنة والنهضة الحديثة التي نتوج هذا العام بمرور واحد وأربعين عاما على انطلاقها المباركة.

• خلال تبادل الهدايا بين الوفدين

AN EXHIBITION about religious tolerance which is touring European cities has come to Leicester.

The St Philip's Centre, in Evington, is hosting the "Religious Tolerance - Islam" in the Sultanate of Oman exhibition.

Leicester is the next stop on the tour after the exhibition visited Madrid.

Riaz Ravat, deputy director at the centre, said: "It is a great coup for us to be selected to host this exhibition."

The exhibition details how in Oman, which is a predominately Muslim country, the rights of minorities such as Buddhists, Christians, Hindus and Jews are guaranteed by the state.

The Rev Canon Dr John Hall, director of St Philip's Centre, said: "We are proud and honoured to be hosting this exhibition."

The exhibition, which is free, is being staged in St Philip's Church at the centre in Evington Road, Evington, from 10am until 4pm up to and including this Friday.

Focus on tolerance

TALLINN — An exhibition on Omani Religious Tolerance opened at the University of Technology in the Estonian capital here yesterday amid wide participation of academics and religious personalities.

The aim of the exhibition is to provide insight into Islam, acquaint Europeans with the Sultanate's experience of religious tolerance and respect to all faiths.

Speaking on the occasion, the Grand Mufti of Esotonia lauded the success of the exhibition in many European countries.

"Today we are being lucky enough to have it here".

He expressed his hope that the exhibition fosters friendly relations between Oman and Estonia and provides a better understanding of the Islamic civilisation.

Dr Mohammed bin Saïd al-Masnam, Scientific Advisor at the Office of the Minister of Awqaf and Religious Affairs, delivered a speech stressing that nothing is better than spreading the message of love among the people. The same message that has for ages been nurtured in Oman confirming that the people are reaching out to all civilisations.

"We have embarked on this exhibition and will continue as we are well aware of the importance of this," he said.

Role in religious tolerance hailed

BHUSHEE — Philip Higgs, Director of the Ministry of Culture and Deputy Mayor of Toronto, hailed the Sultanate's positive initiatives for the improvement of the typical image shared about Islam by some individuals.

He welcomed the agreement on religious tolerance signed from and hailed the Sultanate's efforts in conveying the true message of Islam, which is a religion of peace.

"The Sultanate is a civilized country which respects international charters and other agreements," Higgs added.

He stressed the importance of continuous endeavours to improve communication among authors, religious and general, the Royal and Religious Affairs Ministry in organising a series of exhibitions at various places. In May, it reached the 10th anniversary of the 1989 Declaration of the 10 Principles of Islamic Tolerance in Mecca.

Religious Tolerance in Oman exhibition begins in Italy

DURAGA, Italy — The Religious Tolerance in Oman exhibition kicked off its 25th global round in the Italian city of Bologna, yesterday in the presence of top officials and prominent figures from Oman and Italy.

Organized by the Ministry of Awqaf and Religious Affairs, the event is aimed at providing insight about Islam and disseminating the culture of understanding and peaceful co-existence among world nations.

Speaking on the opening ceremony, Dr. Mohammed bin Saad al-Masmani, Scientific Advisor at the office of the Minister of Awqaf and Religious Affairs and general supervisor of external events, said the exhibition is more contribution to the efforts of communication and interaction by the Omani people with the rest of the world confirming that the Sultanate has always maintained good relationships with others through their round-the-world journeys for trade and civilization.

Holding the exhibition at the University of Bologna under the patronage of the UNESCO Chair for Cultural Diversity opens local horizons for communication between civilizations and affirms the importance of respecting religions and abandoning violence and hatred, Al-Masmani said.

Professor Mohamed Kholif of the UNESCO Chair for Cultural Diversity at the University of Bologna, delivered a speech in which he lauded the Omani Ministry of Awqaf and Religious Affairs for organizing such an event at the University of Bologna and for its efforts in spreading the culture of religious tolerance among people adding that the exhibition can be a kick-start of co-operation and joint programmes between the two entities in the field of religious tolerance and peaceful co-existence.

An Italian language film specially produced for the event and showcasing the religious life in Oman and the progress that took place during the reign of His Majesty Sultan Qaboos, was screened. A booklet in Italian containing explanations of the items on exhibit and insight about Islam was also distributed to the visitors.

The Religious Tolerance in Oman exhibition will be open for the public in Bologna for one month before moving to other European cities. — OINA

The Message of Oman

The exhibition "Religious Tolerance: Islam in the Sultanate of Oman" opened on December 3, 2013 at the Lighthouse Town Hall sponsored by Islamic Culture Centre, Lighthouse in the capital and largest city of Muscat, a number of the European Union, located between Austria, Italy and Croatia. The Republic of Slovenia is an Islamic country which has been a hub between the Islamic, Christian and Latin cultures, and is home to more than 10,000 Muslims, approximately 2 per cent of the country's total Muslim population.

Attending the opening ceremony were Lighthouse's mayor Doran Jackson, Mufti Abdulrahman, and representing Oman's Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, Sheikh Ahmad Sa'ad al-Sayid, Secretary-General of the Islam office. The Sultanate of Oman was also represented by the Mufti Mubammad al-Sayid, Oman's Ambassador accredited to Slovenia and Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Vienna. Distinguished guests included Slovenia's former president, the current minister of defence and foreign affairs, and Egypt's Ambassador to Slovenia. More than 200 visitors attended the opening ceremony.

Mayor Jackson welcomed the distinguished guests by name, and welcomed their visit due to the Sultanate of Oman, which has demonstrated over time its commitment to openness and tolerance. He also expressed his appreciation to the Islamic community and said he did not know who was more looking forward to the opening of Lighthouse's only mosque, the Mufti al-Sayid?

Following the Slovenian Mufti's opening remarks, Sheikh Al-Sayid presented Oman's history legacy of coexistence both at home and abroad, stating that "just as inside Oman, it has been the same abroad, wherever the Omanis lived and traded, such as in East Africa and South-east Asia. Omanis have presented with everyone, even with the pagans and atheists. It is the Omanis who which has paved our relationship and life. The Omanis understood this through the words of the prophet Muhammad, (PBUH), when he stood up at the front of a line of his respect for his humanity and asked those who were not here a question?

Absolutely. He stated that he hoped this exhibition "will spread further in Europe and across many other borders, within the framework of Oman's National Plan for the Alliance of Civilizations, devised in 2009 to promote tolerance and coexistence between civilisations and religions. Oman has been utmost about fostering religious tolerance."

With a population of 2,600,000, Lighthouse is one of the smallest capital cities in Europe, with its centre stretched discretely along the Lighthouse line, spanned by 100,000 foreign. Each year over 1,000,000 cultural events take place in the city. It has managed to retain traces from all periods of its rich history, from the legacy of Roman Britain to the Sassanians, European and Arab invasions periods. Here, culture and history coexist in harmony.

Earlier this year, on September 18, 2013, Slovenia's Prime Minister, Mr. Borut Pahor, laid the foundation stone for the first mosque in Slovenia during a ceremony attended by some 10,000 people, noting that it is a "symbolic victory against all forms of religious intolerance" and that Europe would not be an culturally rich without Islam. Construction should be finished by the end of 2014. The Islamic Religion-Culture Center, also known as the Lighthouse Mosque, is located in the Bergdorf district, comprising the mosque, a library, a classroom, an office, home, library and the Imam's office and quarters. Financial assistance is being provided through a donation made by Oman.

AGENCY: OMAN
July 2013 was the 43rd anniversary of Sultan Qaboos's reign in the Sultanate of Oman. In 1970, when he assumed power, the country was a barren wasteland, and it was only in the early 1990's with the beginning of tourism that the Sultan began to change. Under his leadership of the Sultan the country and its people have made the long and arduous journey without covering their eyes or losing their traditions.

The Sultanate of Oman is surprising in its varied landscapes. rugged mountains, deep canyons, white sands and vast plateaus. The land generously contributes to the vital elements of sand and gravel. The 1,700 km long coastline varies between white sand beaches and steep cliffs. It is easy to see how the legends of 1001 Arabian nights, of Baghdad, the Three Kings, and the riches of the Frankish cross find all come in this region. A broad spectrum of flora and languages reflect Oman's long history as a seafaring nation.
Today the country is exemplary in terms of education and healthcare. Modern infrastructure for communication and transportation is well developed throughout the land, making life easier even in the remotest regions. Omanis serve in high governmental positions, as ministers and ambassadors, and are integrated in all levels of the work force, including ownership and management positions.

It proved important for success in modern development – hence intelligent planning – is the autonomous religious identity of Omanis, the majority of whom subscribe to the Islamic faith. The Islamic philosophy is based on principles of religious tolerance and acceptance of conflict. According to Islamic, Islamic principles must always be considered in relation to cultural norms and historical context. Only then can Islam retain its original spirit and remain truly Islamic. The Islamic school of thought is largely unknown, not only in the west but also in the Islamic world.

In Oman, where Islam is the dominant religion, the practice of other religions is not only tolerated but also encouraged. In Oman there were always members of other religions, such as Jews, Christians, Hindus and Zoroastrians. Due to the principles of religious tolerance that practice was accepted and they were not subjected to any discrimination because of their religious affiliation, even in the past centuries when Islam was in its infancy, a religious state.

Today a large number of followers of various religions live in Oman, where free choice and the practice of religion is guaranteed by the state. There are Christian churches of different denominations, as well as temples for Hindus and Buddhists. Minority activities and professions are protected for all religious communities, including the Islamic.

Responsible for the various religious communities in the country is the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs. The head of this ministry, Minister Hisham Abdullah al-Sayid, has a clear vision of the world and his personal mission: "We have three population groups on earth: the East, consisting of Christians, Jews and Muslims, who believe in one God and a holy book; the second, atheists who have lost all confidence in religion; and the third group, representing a variety of religions and spiritual ideas. We endeavor to maintain a constructive and genuine dialogue with scholars and representatives of all these groups. The aim of exchange is to reflect on the revelations of our tradition, a common morality and a common sense of justice. For only when we are aware of these similarities and draw from a basis for our actions, while accepting cultural differences, will we and our children enjoy a peaceful future."

Foreign Affairs George Vella yesterday evening inaugurated an exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's message of Islam" at St James Cavalier in Valletta. It will run until November 9.

Dr Vella said the exhibition coincided with the celebration of the 40th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between Malta and the Sultanate of Oman. Recalling his visit to the Sultanate of Oman last June, Dr Vella said that the diplomatic relations between the two countries will be strengthened and enhanced in the months ahead.

He underlined the presence of a significant number of Omani students at the University and said further discussions were envisaged to identify more avenues of cooperation in the educational sector as well as in the commercial and economic sectors.

Muslim Interfaith Expert Shares Message of Tolerance and Understanding

Visiting Omani scholar, Dr Mohammed Said Al-Mamari, recently spoke to members and guests of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Brisbane on the topic of achieving peace through understanding and tolerance, despite differences in culture and belief.

Dr Al-Mamari is an advisor to the Sultanate of Oman's Minister of Endowments and Religious Affairs.

He is also the supervisor of Tolerance, Understanding and Coexistence—an initiative established by the government of Oman which promotes dialogue and unity among faiths.

Dr Al-Mamari shared a powerful message of goodwill with those in attendance at the 14 July event. He focused on three principles: knowing about other people; getting to know them individually; and acknowledging them.

"When different people sit with each other, they get to know each other, and hatred ends," Dr Al-Mamari said.

He also highlighted the dangers of exclusive attitudes, rather than inclusive ones.

"Often our societal problems are based on the failure to acknowledge others who are different," he said.

Dr Al-Mamari is highly regarded as an expert in interfaith relations in Oman and around the world. He has spoken to audiences in over 30 nations.

Director of the Centre for Interfaith and Cultural Dialogue at Griffith University, Dr Brian Adams, organised the event.

Dr Adams, who is also a lay leader in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, encouraged those in attendance to reach out to others and respect their choice to worship "how, where or what they may."

"While we will maintain our own beliefs as Latter-day Saints," he said, "it is also core to us to allow others to do the same."

Young Brisbane woman, Maelee Kelly, said she wanted to act on Dr Al-Mamari's invitation "to better get to know people of other religions and cultures."

'PEACE TO THE WORLD': Exhibition introduces Islam in Oman in its purest image through real life of tolerance and understanding

QUEENSLAND: The "Message of Islam" Exhibition, which continues its global tour to advocate the values of peaceful coexistence, mutual understanding and positive dialogue under the title "Peace to the Whole World" was held at the Multi-Religious Studies Centre in the Queensland Griffith University, which is one of the most important centres that seek to spread the values of peace and mutual respect.

The exhibition will continue till July 22. Dr Bryan Adams, Head of the centre, said, "What distinguishes this exhibition is that it introduces Islam in Oman in its purest image through real life of tolerance, understanding and co-existence with all human beings and acceptance of others while preserving the customs and traditions of their communities and this is an important lesson for all human beings".

He added: "We are in the Multi-Religious Studies Centre aim to find respect for different religions through building bridges of understanding of customs and traditions that are enjoyed by other religions" adding "when we respect each other, we can turn our society into productive one, and this is what the exhibition calls for through transferring the experience of the Sultanate team.

Mohammed bin Said al-Musart, Supervisor General of the exhibition, said in his speech: "The exhibition is its first time in Australia has acquired a new partnership with prestigious institutions and centres to deliver the message of peace to the world, stressing that "The young people in the world need to have real initiatives to enlighten them with the spiritual values and the importance of the role of universities and scientific centres in this aspect".

He praised that "The aim of the exhibition is the delivery of Oman's experience in shared values and common human values for a better tomorrow for the present generations and the coming future".

The exhibition centres within the content of the efforts made by the Sultanate in the dissemination of noble human values and bringing the message of peace to the world, amid an atmosphere of regional tensions, and the spill over of extremism, terrorism and violence, and to be the voice of (the message of peace) in response to all of these inhuman practices that are inconsistent with the teachings of religious and cultures, that love mercy and peace.

The exhibition managed through its varied paintings, exhibits and events to draw the attention of visitors to the moral conscience being conveyed by the Sultanate under the leadership of His Majesty Sultan Qaboos that has made Oman the focus of the world's attention for its mission in all that leads to peace, and dispense resolving by peaceful means and avoiding extremism, violence and hatred. - ONA

EXPOSITION : « LE MESSAGE DE L'ISLAM D'OMAN »

Tolérance religieuse et compréhension mutuelle pour une coexistence pacifique

Le hall du Grand Théâtre national accueille, jusqu'au 13 avril, l'exposition « Le message de l'Islam d'Oman ». Initiée par l'ambassade du Sultanat d'Oman à Dakar, cette exposition itinérante, qui compte faire le tour du monde, a pour objectif de promouvoir les valeurs de tolérance religieuse, de compréhension mutuelle et de coexistence pacifique.

Région montagneuse à cheval entre l'Afrique et l'Inde, Oman est une contrée riche en histoire. Son passé glorieux porte les empreintes d'une civilisation islamique millénaire acceptée sans « heurts » et sans « contraintes » durant la vie du prophète Mouhamed. Ce dernier, en l'an 629, envoya une lettre aux deux rois d'Oman (Abd et Jadar) pour les inviter à devenir ses disciples. Ce qu'ils vont accepter... Pays majoritairement musulman, cette nation se distingue par la liberté de religion garantie au Sultanat où « il y a eu historiquement une acceptation et une compréhension mutuelle » ainsi qu'une « coexistence pacifique entre les diverses communautés religieuses ». L'exposition « Le message de l'Islam d'Oman », à découvrir jusqu'au 13 avril dans le hall du Grand Théâtre national, revient avec force détails sur ce message de paix, de tolérance et de compréhension. Elle ouvre un petit survol de l'histoire permettant de constater comment les dirigeants omanais, qui étaient installés à Zanzibar, étaient ouverts et tolé-rants envers les chrétiens de l'Afrique orientale. Par exemple, « en 1868, le Sultan omanais Majid a accordé un grand terrain aux Pères du Saint-Esprit au nord de Bagamoyo sur la côte africaine afin de leur permettre la première mission en Afrique orientale ». Comme l'indique les différents panneaux de l'expo, à Oman, la tolérance religieuse est une réalité historique qui a traversé les âges. Ce peuple, ouvert au monde, a entretenu pendant plus de 5.000 ans des relations commerciales avec diverses rationalités. Aujourd'hui, cette tolérance religieuse cimentera encore la société omanaise où l'Etat garantit aux adeptes de différentes religions la liberté de culte. Cette exposition se veut un message de paix à travers le monde. Elle s'inscrit dans un contexte particulier où l'image de l'Islam se trouve écornée dans certains pays et particulièrement ceux de l'Occident. C'est donc une façon d'œuvrer à la promotion d'une véritable compréhension de l'Islam qui est « une religion modérée ». Mais également de combat-

vie et la transformation d'Oman en un Etat moderne et ouvert ont contribué à changer les pratiques et opinions prévalant dans les relations avec les femmes ». Dans ce pays, la scolarisation des petites filles est devenue obligatoire. Ce qui a boosté le pourcentage de la présence des femmes au niveau du cycle universitaire. Les droits politiques de femmes sont protégés par l'Etat. Ce faisant, elles occupent de hauts postes de responsabilité au sein du gouvernement ainsi que dans les représentations diplomatiques.

L'exposition « Le message de l'Islam d'Oman » est, selon l'ambassadeur d'Oman à Dakar, Abdoullah Mohamed El Amri, une exposition itinérante à travers le monde dont l'objectif est de promouvoir les valeurs de tolérance religieuse, de compréhension mutuelle et de coexistence pacifique. Le Sénégal, qui à ses yeux présente des similitudes avec ce pays sur le plan des valeurs culturelles et religieuses, est le premier pays ciblé pour accueillir la première étape de cette exposition en terre africaine. Le ministre de la Promotion des Investissements, des Partenariats et du Développement des Télé services de l'Etat, qui a ouvert le vernissage de l'expo au nom de son collègue de la Culture, a indiqué que le choix de faire abriter le Sénégal cette exposition traduit la convergence des deux peuples dans une culture de tolérance. D'après Khoudia Mbays, cette exhibition est, de par son message, une alerte sur les enjeux du moment avec la montée de l'extrémisme religieux et du terrorisme. Pour le ministre, ce thème « nous rappelle notre fraternité » et diffuse les vraies valeurs de l'Islam. D'où la nécessité de l'expliquer aux enfants afin de construire une culture de paix.

العام على المعرض محمد بن سعيد المعمرى: إن نشر النوايا الحسنة لجميع الناس أمر لا مثيل له. ونؤمن إيماناً عميقاً بأن السلام والاستقرار في العالم لا يمكن تحقيقهما اليوم وفي أي مجتمع إلا من خلال الحوار والتفاهم. ونحن نعتقد بصق أنه من خلال تكاتف المجتمع الدولي والشعوب المحبة للسلام معاً يمكننا تحقيق قيم التعايش السلمي والوثام الإنساني والقيم المشتركة. وأكد المعمرى بأن إقامة المعرض في نورمبرج جاء نتيجة للتعاون الوثيق بين وزارة الأوقاف والشؤون الدينية في السلطنة وجمعية السداقة العمانية الألمانية وبيت العرب نورمبرج ومركز الدراسات الأوروبية الشرقية في جامعة فريدريش الكسندر إيرلانجن - نورمبرج وجمعية التاريخ الطبيعي الألمانية. جدير بالذكر أن معرض (رسالة

في إطار حرص السلطنة والتزامها بنشر وتعزيز ثقافة التسامح الديني والتفاهم المتبادل والتعايش السلمي بين المذاهب والثقافات والشعوب، أفتتح معرض «رسالة الإسلام من عُمان» بمتحف التاريخ الطبيعي بمدينة نورمبرج الألمانية برعاية وزير الداخلية في ولاية بافاريا معالي ديواخيم هيرمان، وعمدة مدينة نورمبرج اللورد دأولريش مالي، كما شارك في حفل الافتتاح سفيرة السلطنة المعتمدة لدى جمهورية ألمانيا الاتحادية سعادة السفيرة ليونا بنت سلطان المغيرة، ورئيس جمعية الصداقة العمانية الألمانية برونو كايبر، والمستشار العلمي بمكتب الوزير والأوقاف والشؤون الدينية والمشرف العام على معرض (رسالة الإسلام) المستشار محمد بن سعيد المعمرى، والعديد من الصحفيين البارزين من المؤسسات المشاركة والمجتمع.

وأشار وزير الداخلية البافاري معالي ديواخيم هيرمان في خطابه الترحيبي، إلى أن المعرض يشكل مساهمة مهمة في تعزيز التسامح الديني والتعايش السلمي في ألمانيا. من جانبه أكد مدير جمعية البيت العربي نورمبرج البروفيسور هورست كروب أنه من خلال التفاهم القائم على المعرفة يمكن أن يتطور التفاهم والتعايش بطريقة ملموسة داخل المجتمع. وفي هذا الصدد، أعرب عمدة مدينة نورمبرج دمال عن أمه في فهم أعمق للرسالة الحقيقية للإسلام التي أتت بها العرض طويل الأمد للمعرض والمعالجات الكثيرة المصاحبة للحدث. وفي كلمتها الترحيبية قالت سعادة السفيرة ليونا المغيرة بعد الترحيب بالضيوف إن معرض (رسالة الإسلام) يهدف إلى توسيع مظلة قيم التسامح والتفاهم والتعايش بين شعوب العالم من خلال التنسيق مع المنظمات الدولية والمراكز الدينية المهتمة بنشر القيم المعتدلة والدعوة للسلام والتعايش بين الناس والثقافات والأديان. وأضافت: «عمان سعت إلى التعبير بوضوح وصدق عن موقفها ورؤيتها تجاه مختلف القضايا الإقليمية والدولية بهدف تعزيز السلام والأمن في العالم». وقال المستشار العلمي بمكتب وزير الأوقاف والشؤون الدينية والمشرف

Sonderschau in der Naturhistorischen Gesellschaft stellt den toleranten Islam im arabischen Oman vor

VON HARTMUT VOIGT

Das ist die zentrale Botschaft der kleinen Schau im Foyer. „Im Oman herrscht ein offener, liberaler Islam, der weder zu Sunniten noch zu Schiiten zählt“, sagt Professor Horst Kopp vom Arabischen Haus Nürnberg, dem Mitveranstalter der Ausstellung. Anderen Glaubensgemeinschaften wie Christen, Juden, Buddhisten oder Hindus werde Religionsfreiheit garantiert. Das Land auf der Arabischen Halbinsel beherbergt 4,4 Millionen Bewohner, davon sind etwa die Hälfte Gastarbeiter – unter anderem aus Bangladesch und den Philippinen.

Stärkere Stellung der Frau

Die Stellung der Frau ist in dem Nachbarland des Jemen und der Vereinigten Arabischen Emirate stärker als in anderen islamischen Herrschaftsgebieten: „Scheidung ist möglich, 70 Prozent der Studentenschaft Omans ist weiblich“, zählt Kopp auf, „außerdem haben Frauen gleichberechtigtes Erbrecht, das ist eine große Ausnahme.“

Geprägt hat die Atmosphäre der seit 1970 amtierende Herrscher Qabus ibn Saïd. Als der Sultan die Macht von seinem Vater übernahm, besaß das Land nur zehn Kilometer geteerte Straßen, drei Grundschulen und eine Krankenstation. Seither hat die Infrastruktur einen enormen Schub gemacht: Im Jahr 2010 betrug das geteerte Straßennetz über 20.000 Kilometer, neben 1000 Schulen und einer Universität haben sich zwölf Privathochschulen etabliert. Und 60 Krankenhäuser sowie 140 Polikliniken kümmern sich um die Gesundheit der Bewohner.

Möglich würde diese Entwicklung durch die Öl- und Gasvorkommen, die 95 Prozent der Staatseinnahmen sichern. Die Ressourcen sind endlich, daher muss sich das Land am Arabischen Meer Gedanken über die wirtschaftliche Entwicklung der Zukunft machen. Die Verwertung großer Kupfervorkommen ist ebenso ein Thema wie Tourismus, es gibt endlose Küsten-strifen. Der Oman hat eine uralte Tradition als Seefahrer- und Handelsnation, darauf macht in der Norisshalle ein Tisch mit Gewürzschalen aufmerksam. Kardamom, Muskatnuss, Pfeffer, Nelken, getrocknete Zitronen, Zimt und Pfeffer verbreiten einen intensiven Duft. Die Gewürze stammen aber nicht aus dem Sultanat. Sie wurden aus Ländern am Indischen Ozean und aus China importiert.

Dagegen kommt Weihrauchharz original aus dem Oman, der Baum wächst in dieser kargen Gegend mit Wüsten und Gebirgen. Das aromatische Harz wird aber nicht, wie in der katholischen Kirche, zu religiösen Zeremonien verwendet. Vielmehr verbreitet man den süßlichen Geruch in der Wohnung, bei Festen oder um die Kleidung zu desinfizieren. „Die Weihrauchstraße ist neben der Seidenstraße die älteste Handelsroute der Welt“, merkt Horst Kopp vom Arabischen Haus an.

Leuchtend weiße Kleidung

Der Verein veranstaltet die Schau mit der Deutsch-Omanischen Gesellschaft, der Naturhistorischen Gesellschaft, dem Centre for Euro-Oriental Studies der Universität Erlangen-Nürnberg und der Naturhistorischen Gesellschaft. NHG-Vorstand Gabriele Prasser ist bei ihrem Aufenthalt im Oman neben der Freundlichkeit der Menschen aufgefallen, dass die Bevölkerung sehr großen Wert auf eine leuchtend weiße Kleidung legt: „Da muss jedes zweite Geschäft eine Reinigung sein“, meint sie lachend.

Die Ausstellung vermittelt einen ersten Eindruck zu Tradition und Gegenwart im Oman. Wer sich einen Überblick verschaffen will, hat dazu an einem Multimediaterminal die Möglichkeit: Er gibt die Daten und Fakten in zahlreichen Sprachen wieder. Und wer den Oman genauer kennenlernen will, kann an einer 16-tägigen Reise mit Professor Kopp im Frühjahr 2019 teilnehmen. Informationen dazu gibt es an der Kasse der Naturhistorischen Gesellschaft.

Die Omans Botschaft des Islam ist bis 28. April 2019 in der Norisshalle, Marienorgaben 8, zu sehen.

OMAN'S EXPO AT UN SPREADS NATION'S MESSAGE OF ISLAM

The exhibition, 'Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam', which began on April 15, is the result of cooperation between the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs of Oman and the Permanent Mission of the Sultanate of Oman to the United Nations

The "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam" exhibition aimed at promoting common values among nations was opened at the United Nations Headquarters in New York on April 15, under the auspices of Maria Forastia Zappala, Secretary General, President of the United Nations General Assembly, and Maria Luisa Virelli, the Chief de Cabinet to UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres.

It was held in the presence of Ambassador Khalifa bin Ali Al Harby, Permanent Representative of the Sultanate of Oman to the United Nations, Mohamed Said Al Mansoori, Advisor at Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs who is also the Supervisor of the Exhibition.

The exhibition at the UN is the result of cooperation between the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs of Oman and the Permanent Mission of the Sultanate of Oman to the United Nations.

The opening ceremony was held in the presence of a number of eminent personalities at the UN. Those who attended the ceremony included a number of ambassadors, heads of religious centres, academics and religious communities from New York.

AN EXHIBITION TOUCHING THE WORLD

The exhibition is hosted in more than 122 cities worldwide in more than 26 countries, in educational institutions, museums, cultural centres, government agencies and religious institutions, as well as in the UN Headquarters in Vienna.

INFORMATIVE PANELS

The 24 panels in this exhibition present facts of a modern Arab country and offer the visitor insights into the practice of Islam in daily life, an examination of contemporary Omani society and the role of women in society. All collateral materials are currently available in 26 languages.

SAND ART PERFORMANCE

A live performance was given by Shamsul al-Mughalibay, an acclaimed Omani sand artist, as a part of the opening ceremony with a sand art performance, depicting the historical and religious development of Omani society from the times of early Islam until today.

FINE ART AND CALLIGRAPHY

Through the calligraphy and fine art, calligrapher Mohammed Al-Hadi was able to convey the value of the exhibition to the guests. He wrote the names of the guests on placards, which were widely appreciated by the audience.

ACT FOR TOLERANCE

TOLERANCE is a social media initiative undertaken by the organizers of the exhibition, Oman's Message of Islam. It aims to draw attention to the project to create worldwide. The organizers believe that there are talented people who can embody the message of tolerance by using distinctive photographic and expressive works of art.

TOLERANCE is intended to involve the global community in promoting tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence.

MESSAGES OF GOODWILL

A promotion stand for the initiative is located within the exhibition space and visitors get the option of being photographed with a "TOLERANCE" board.

Visitors also receive Tolerance and Coexistence cards and postcards with text messages encouraging mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence, such as "Safety lies in the middle course. Speak kindly to mankind! With people who you wish for yourself! Be kind people are those who are more helpful to others. We have made you safe and when that one may become mutually acquainted, there are reward for good other than good? Remains the best to those who remained good. Do not betray even the one who betrayed you! Conquer a righteousness and piety! Meet people with good manners!

The guests of the exhibition expressed their happiness and respect at what they saw of exhibits calling for common human values, and the importance of the exhibition in the United Nations Headquarters.

"It is especially timely that this exhibition has now arrived at the United Nations Headquarters in New York. Although it is hosted in Omani institutions, including museums, this exhibition has a message for the world, because hatred has been on the rise, never last month's massacre at a mosque in New Zealand, in last October's killing in a synagogue in Pittsburgh, to mention a few," Maria Luisa Virelli, Under-Secretary General and UN Chief de Cabinet, said.

"This exhibition is a contribution to promoting mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence. This exhibition is about better knowing each other — and loving in each one of us our shared humanity. We thank the government and people of Oman for their support. Let us all focus on what unites us, and work together to defend equality and dignity for everyone, everywhere," she concluded.

Ambassador Khalifa bin Ali Al Harby, Permanent Representative of the Sultanate of Oman to the UN, said that the aim of the initiative was to promote international peaceful coexistence, and inter-religious dialogue.

"Personally, I am glad to have 9 today at the United Nations, the place which embodies the message of the people of the world, to have mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence. Throughout history and especially in the last few decades, we have witnessed many acts of hate and terrorism. I will live in New York to the recent massacre in New Zealand, which were all committed in the name of religion or just for being different. These examples highlight the need for all of us to do more to live and let live together in harmony and respect. This exhibition supports that noble goal," Al Harby added.

On his part, Mohammed Said Al Mansoori, Advisor at Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs, agreed that hosting the exhibition in the United Nations building is not another example of the success of Omani diplomacy. And another evidence of the appreciation of the Sultanate and His Majesty the Sultan in international forums and international organizations.

She Douglas Leonard Representative of the World Council of Churches to the United Nations, was awed by saying that he was so happy to see Oman and the exhibition on display for the world to understand that Oman is a country like Oman.

"It is a great opportunity to see the exhibition from Oman at the UN in New York because we have all the 193 nations using the exhibition. It makes me so happy to understand that Oman is a country of tolerance, beauty and respect for the world and it warms my heart as I used to live in Oman and I miss Oman so much, so to be here it makes me feel at home again," Douglas Leonard added.

Ambasciatrice Mariangela Zappala, Permanent Representative of Italy to the United Nations, said, "As the Italian representative of a country which has very close friendship with Oman, it is a great opportunity for me to express our support for the message of coexistence and tolerance." This made it what we need now more than it is. I am very grateful to Oman for organizing this exhibition."

Ambasciatrice Sybil Al-Busaidi, Permanent Representative of India to the United Nations, said, "We in India are well aware of Omani tradition of tolerance, which is a ledge of understanding between different cultures. We in India also greatly respect the Omani tradition of coexistence."

Ambasciatrice Mohamed Al-Bin, Permanent Representative of Egypt to the United Nations, said, "I am happy to be with you in this important exhibition at this important time. This message is the message of Islam to the world. This message represents the real essence of the Islam. Therefore, I believe that this exhibition at this time is also consistent with the general feeling that we must all stand together in the face of hatred and in the face of destruction of religions and in the face of the false image of the Islam, which does not reflect the truth of this ancient religion."

Ambasciatrice Mabel Ghali Fathi Abdel Aziz, Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States to the United Nations, said, "I am happy to be present at this important ceremony on the side of Islam to foster coexistence and to achieve international peace and security, one of the main purposes of the United Nations. The Sultanate of Oman is distinguished by its coexistence and impartial positions and its diverse heritage appreciated by the Arab Group. It is also intended to maintain dialogue between our peoples. We are proud of the role played by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Permanent Mission here in New York both in terms of the dissemination of tolerance and its reaching common thought, and in terms of supporting international efforts to find peaceful solutions to the existing global problems, especially the Arab problems, which we are seeing increasingly increase in our Arab world, and need a lot of effort."

We wish the Sultanate of Oman and its wise leadership success in its ongoing initiatives in this direction."

The exhibition has been hosted in a variety of institutions including universities, adult education centres, city halls, libraries, UN headquarters, government ministries, museums of great artistic beauty using the same as a focal point in meetings, conferences, and special events, all adding to interfaith dialogue and all promoting Omani message of religious tolerance, mutual understanding and peaceful coexistence to the world.

Message of Islam expo a big hit in Washington

Washington: The Sultan Qaboos Cultural Centre, in cooperation with the Omani Embassy in Washington, hosted Oman's Message of Islam exhibition, which landed in the US capital, Washington DC, in the presence of prominent political figures, Arab and foreign ambassadors, heads of religious centers, Arab communities, interested people, academics and invited members of the US society.

The ceremony began with a welcome introduction by Kathleen Ridolfo, Executive Director of the Sultan Qaboos Cultural Center in Washington DC, considering the event as an exceptional event to learn about the values of tolerance in the Omani society. Hanina bint Sultan Al Mughairy, Sultanate's Ambassador to the United States of America (USA), delivered a speech stressing the importance of the exhibition in highlighting the Sultanate's efforts in promoting values of tolerance and the dissemination of dialogue messages among religions.

She pointed out that the exhibition, which has visited 37 countries so far, is appreciated and praised. The exhibition will contribute to highlight the common human values to the US society and promote values of peaceful coexistence and mutual respect.

"Act for Tolerance" campaign has received a remarkable public interaction; a campaign that seeks to raise awareness on the importance of individual and institutional initiatives to promote a culture of tolerance and coexistence among all.

Omani Harmony: Oman Spreads Its Message of Tolerance, Understanding and Coexistence Around the World

"Extremism, under whatever guise, fanaticism of whatever kind, factionalism of whatever persuasion would be hateful poisonous plants in the soil of our country which will not be allowed to flourish."

Shaimah Al-Mughairy does a sand art performance for the audience at the recent opening of the exhibition "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam," held at the Sultan Qaboos Cultural Center in Washington, D.C.

Those words were spoken 25 years ago by His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said al Said, the leader of Oman. Since taking power of this strategically important Gulf nation in 1970, Sultan Qaboos has transformed Oman into a modern nation with a strong economy, political stability and a low-key but highly influential role in regional affairs.

In the process, Sultan Qaboos has ensured that religious strife does not poison the soil of his country by planting the seeds of a moderate, tolerant brand of Islam at home.

Today, the government is promoting this vision of Islam abroad through a traveling worldwide exhibition known as "Tolerance, Understanding, Coexistence: Oman's Message of Islam."

That message has now spread to 125 cities in over 36 countries — so far — since the project's inception in April 2010.

Political Development

www.islam-in-oman.com

Since 1970 His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said Al-Said has personally steered the development of the country by using social and political policies. His goal was and is to modernize the country without breaking with tradition.

Therefore the State Council initially was comprised mainly of tribal leaders. Since the mid-1990s there has been a bicameral parliament, the Council of Oman, consisting of the State Council (Majlis ad Dowlat) and the Consultative Council (Majlis Ash-Shura).

The members of the State Council are appointed by the Sultan, the members of the Consultative Council are elected by the people and represent individual districts. All decisions in the Council of Oman are taken by majority. The State Council may not have more members than the Consultative Council. For women and men over 21 years of age, there is universal suffrage, and anyone may hold public office.

The turmoil in the Arab world in early 2011 led to an awakening of political awareness in many segments of Omani society and throughout the population. Demands were made, abuses were denounced, but deep gratitude to Sultan Qaboos was expressed for the achievements of the past 40 years.

An open discussion on the future of the country led to a series of reforms:

- Expansion of the powers of the Council of Oman in the field of legislation and oversight of the ministries.
- Appointment of 13 new ministers, primarily from among the elected members of the Consultative Council, the Majlis Ash Shura.
- Reform of the Constitution of 1996.
- Guaranteed independence of the public prosecutor's office.

During the last 40 years the harbor area of historical Muscat has developed into a modern administrative center for the country. In his palace the sultan receives visitors from all over the world, and the top officials of the land are residing here.

Islam arrives in Oman

www.islam-in-oman.com

Islam was accepted peacefully in Oman, without coercion, during the Prophet's lifetime. In the year 629 the Prophet Mohammed sent a letter to the two kings of Oman, Abd and Jaifar, sons of Julanda, living in Sohar, exhorting them to become his followers. Delegations were exchanged to study and consider this, and Abd and Jaifar became believers and converted freely.

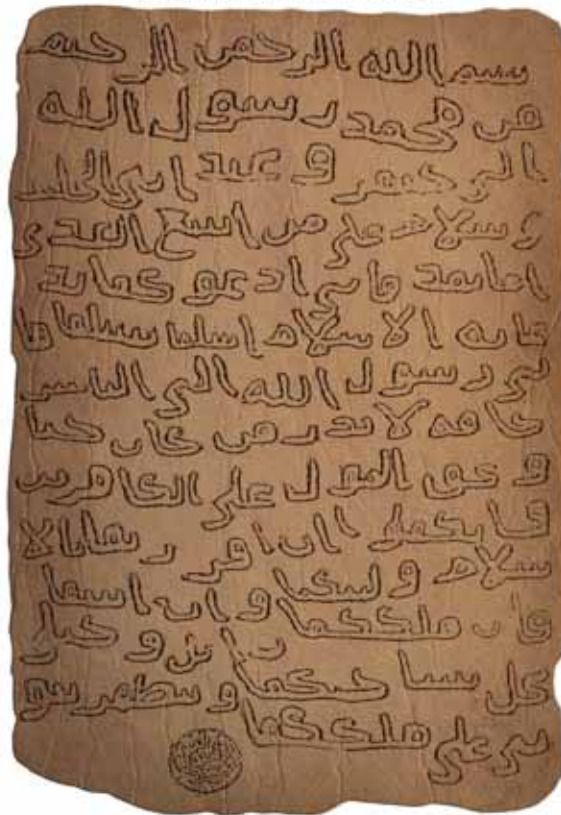

The two kings of Oman united the Arab tribes and expelled the Persians, and political power remained in the hands of the Al Julanda dynasty until Oman was annexed to Basra by the third caliph, Uthman bin Affan. It was the duty of the caliphs – first Abu Bakr, then Umar bin Al Khattab – to appoint the governors of the Muslims.

A bloody confrontation between the caliphs Ali and Muawiyah created a schism which led to the development the Sunni and Shiite schools of jurisprudence. Abd bin Al Julanda decided that Oman would not follow either of these schools, initially keeping Oman largely independent of Umayyid rule. Eventually the Al Julanda dynasty was forced to relocate to Africa due to military attacks attempting to coerce submission.

As a result, a center of political resistance to Umayyad hegemony was created in Oman, which over time evolved into the Ibadhi school of thought.

Development of Islam in Oman

www.islam-in-oman.com

While the Quran is the source of all Islamic jurisprudence, differing interpretations and beliefs have resulted in different schools of thought. Groups first diverged after the Prophet Muhammad died in 632, and his followers could not agree whether to choose bloodline successors, or leaders most likely to follow the tenets of the faith.

The Sunni branch contends that the first four caliphs - Mohammed's successors - rightfully took his place as the leaders of Muslims. They recognize the heirs of the four caliphs as legitimate religious leaders. They chose Abu Bakr, the prophet's adviser, to become the first successor, or caliph, to lead the Muslim state.

The Sunni imams are always chosen from among the members of the tribe of the Prophet Mohammed, the Quraish.

Shiites, in contrast, believe that only the heirs of the fourth caliph, Ali (Muhammad's cousin and son-in-law) are the legitimate successors of Mohammed.

For the Ibadhis however, the imam's ancestry is irrelevant. The Ibadhis maintain that every faithful and theologically educated Muslim is a potential candidate for the office and can be chosen as imam. The imam is a religious and civic leader with full governmental power. He is "the first among equals" in the eyes of the Ibadhis, just as humans are first among God's other creatures. Therefore the umma, the community of Muslims, selects from its ranks a believer who is best qualified for the office.

If no one can meet the high demands of the office of imam, the position remains temporarily unfilled. Similarly, an elected imam who does not meet expectations can be voted out of office.

Jabir b. Zayd (died year 93 AH / 711 AD), a religious leader of the Ibadhi community, was one of the main founders associated with Ibadhism.

Born in Nizwa in Oman, he later settled in Iraq. In spite of the distance, he maintained close ties with his home country. The Al-Muhallab and Al-Azd tribes both supported him in the creation of the Ibadhi school.

Jabir bin Zaid advised Ibn Ibadh on most of his political activities. Together they refuted groups like Qadarites, Mutazilites, Murjiites, and even Kharijites. The early Ibadhiyah were a moderate group, limited in numbers.

Even today Nizwa is a major center of Ibadhiyah

Peaceful Coexistence

The philosophy of the Ibadhis is based on principles of religious tolerance and the avoidance of conflict and violence. Other religious views or models of interpretation must be respected. Prayers in the mosques throughout the country are conducted with Sunnis and Shiites side by side with Ibadhis. Sunnis and Shiites have always lived in harmony and accord with the Ibadhis, who have been and continue to be the majority in Oman.

The communal prayer to God knows no theological disputes. Everyone must answer for himself before God. As for the deciding of legal issues, scholars considered the following to be the basis for making judgments in cases before the Islamic community, in this order: the Quran, the Sunnah, the opinions of other senior men, and lastly, one's own judgment.

Ibadhism is based on the effort to return to the purity of Islamic faith and society exactly along the tenets prescribed by the Prophet Mohammed. Ibadhis have always maintained their firm loyalty to the Quran, the Sunnah, and to their fellow Muslims, and have had an open attitude, inviting people to understand their views, and giving them time to decide reconsider their opinions. The Ibadhis made it clear that they would not fight their opponents unless they were attacked first. Bloodshed due to theological differences is regarded as shameful.

Throughout history members of other faiths were found in Oman: Jews, Christians, Hindus, Sikhs, Buddhists and others. Due to the principles of religious tolerance their presence in the past centuries was accepted, and they were not discriminated against due to their religious affiliation, even in the times of the religious state, the imamate.

Religious Tolerance throughout History

www.islam-in-oman.com

Arab merchants and traders, such as Abdullah al Qassim from Bahla, Oman, were important members of the Arab community in 10th century Canton and contributed to the building of the first mosque in China.

There is evidence that a king of Kerala became the first-known convert to Islam from India. He went to Mecca to meet the Prophet Mohammed, and then settled down in southern Oman. He sent messengers and established the first ten mosques on the west coast of south India.

Oman's 5000-year-old history of trade has also left its imprint throughout the land, where there developed a unique climate of openness and tolerance, as noted in this quote from the Englishman John Ovington, chaplain to King James II, on his visit to Muscat in 1633:

"These Arabians are very courteous and extremely civil to all strangers; they offer neither violence or affront in any way; and tho' they are very tenacious of their own principles, and admirers of their own religion, yet do they never impose it on any; nor are their morals evened with such furious zeal, as to divert them of humanity and a tender respect ... In fine, these are a people naturally temperate and just, and imbued with those excellent qualities which Grecian philosophers and Roman moralists endeavoured to inspire into their subjects, tho' they missed their aim."

Minorities which were persecuted elsewhere found respite and a home in Oman, where they were amicably integrated into society.

Carsten Niebuhr, a German traveler, visited Muscat on January 3, 1765.

He reports:

"Banians from India are settled in great numbers in the commercial city. At Mokha they suffer many mortifications, but in Muscat, among the tolerant sect of the Beiasi, they are permitted to observe the laws, and cultivate worship of their own religion without disturbance."

In 1824, Captain George Keppel, a British traveler, visited Muscat while coming back from India to England. He characterized the Muslims of Oman as follows: "They worship no saints; and have neither convents nor dervishes. They have a great regard for justice; and a universal toleration of other religions."

The American businessman and diplomat, Edmund Roberts, visited Sayyid Said in 1833 and reported about the ruler of Oman:

"All religions within the Sultan's dominions, are not merely tolerated, but they are protected by his highness; and there is no obstacle whatever to prevent the Christians, the Jew, or the Gentile, from preaching their peculiar doctrines, or erecting temples."

www.islam-in-oman.com

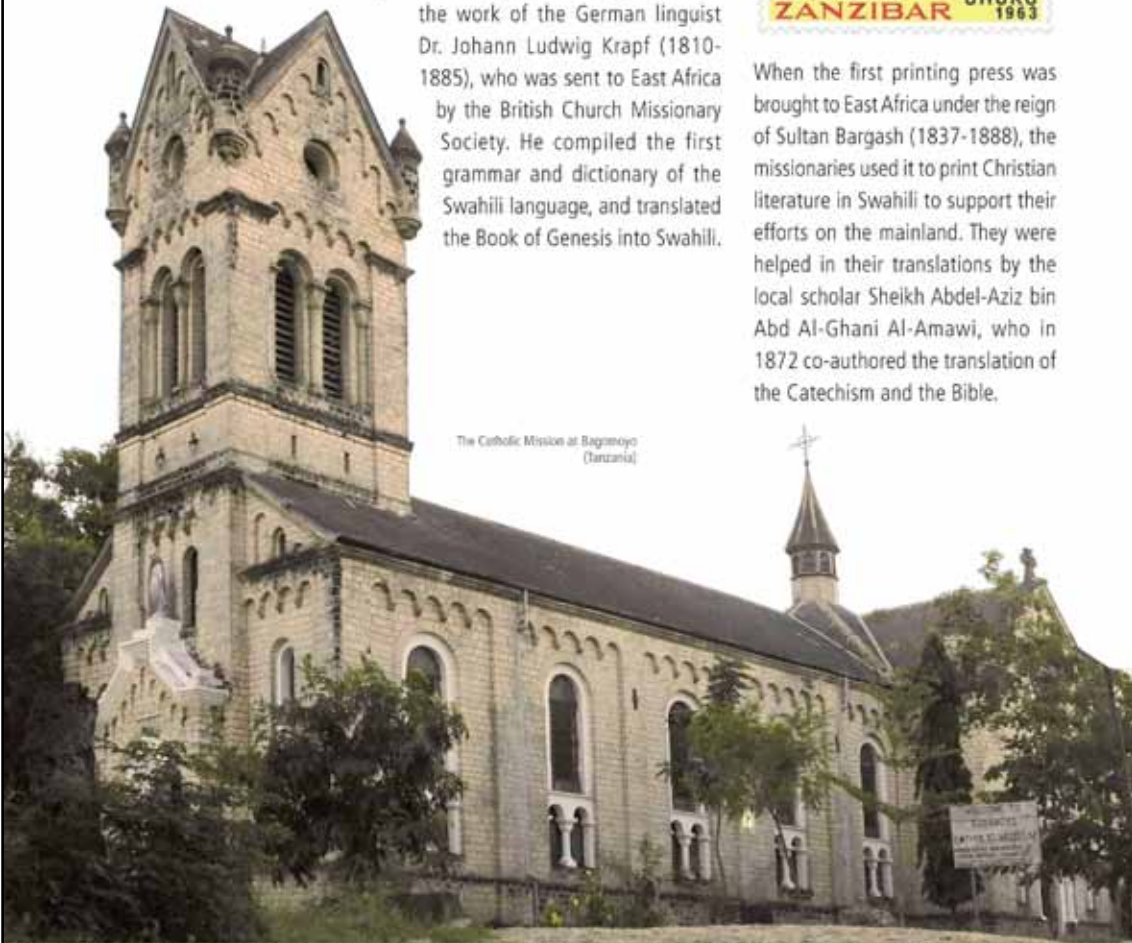

The Omani rulers who were based in Zanzibar were open and tolerant toward Christians in East Africa. In 1868 the Omani Sultan Majid (1834-1870) bestowed a vast tract of land to the "Fathers of the Holy Ghost" north of Bagamoyo on the mainland coast, in order for them to build the first mission in East Africa. The mission on this land grant is still active today.

Sultan Majid also strongly supported the work of the German linguist Dr. Johann Ludwig Krapf (1810-1885), who was sent to East Africa by the British Church Missionary Society. He compiled the first grammar and dictionary of the Swahili language, and translated the Book of Genesis into Swahili.

When the first printing press was brought to East Africa under the reign of Sultan Bargash (1837-1888), the missionaries used it to print Christian literature in Swahili to support their efforts on the mainland. They were helped in their translations by the local scholar Sheikh Abdel-Aziz bin Abd Al-Ghani Al-Amawi, who in 1872 co-authored the translation of the Catechism and the Bible.

Mutual Understanding

www.islam-in-oman.com

Today a large number of followers of various religions are found in Oman, where the state guarantees freedom of religion for the country's nationals and residents. The Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs is responsible for the various religious communities in Oman, which it provides with the facilities necessary to practice their faith. Christian churches of various denominations are found in Muscat and Salalah, with temples for Hindus, Sikhs and Buddhists as well.

The law prohibits public proselytizing by all religious groups.

Oman is actively working to promote a true understanding of Islam to counter the spread of stereotypical and erroneous views of Islam which leads to bigotry.

Within the framework of Oman's "National Plan for the Alliance of Civilisations," created in 2009, Oman is fostering religious tolerance, encouraging greater intellectual and cultural interactions between peoples, and creating a network based on the principles of mutual understanding, acceptance, and friendship.

Bridges of Understanding

www.islam-in-oman.com

Various religious institutions in Oman take responsibility for overseeing the practice of religion according to their own traditions, values and customs. These include the Protestant Church of Oman, the Hindu Mahajan Temple, the Catholic Diocese of Oman and the Al Amana Centre, established by the Reformed Church in America.

In 1893 the Sultan of Oman, Sultan Faisal bin Turki, invited doctors of the Reformed Church in America to establish hospitals in the coastal towns of Muscat and Muttrah. This was at a time in Oman's history when many children and citizens of Oman were dying of diseases such as malaria and tuberculosis. Trachoma, a disease of the upper eyelids, and typhoid fever were also prevalent.

The goal of the Reformed Church in America was to assist Oman in eradicating these infectious diseases and in developing Oman's medical sector, which in time would be staffed and managed by Omanis. The first doctors, staff and hospital administrators in Oman were educated in the hospitals of the Reformed Church. These succeeded only because of the collaborative effort between the people of Oman and those of many other nationalities and faiths, who worked side by side to serve the needs of the entire community.

With the modern development of the country, the medical role it played was no longer needed, and a new vision emerged to respond to the challenges of today's world. It was then that the Reformed Church sought partners to create an ecumenical center - the Al Amana Centre - which would use its legacy to work internationally and build bridges of understanding and cooperation between religions and to work for the common good.

Mosques in Oman

www.islam-in-oman.com

Mosques are an important part of Omani daily life. They serve as places of prayer, schools for the study of religion and as meeting places for the community.

Mosques which were built in the Ibadhi tradition are simple structures and have no minaret. The simple interiors are occasionally adorned by decorations and calligraphy in the prayer niche and on the wooden ceiling.

Before the act of prayer a ritual washing is necessary, thus mosques were usually built near water sources such as wells or the traditional irrigation system of canals, the afraj. In this age of municipal water supplies, mosques are located everywhere – often with separate prayer rooms for men and women.

In 2001 the Sultan Qaboos Grand Mosque was completed in Muscat. The architecture of the mosque is subdued yet rich in detail and it succeeds in combining the diverse artistic traditions of various Islamic eras and regions in grand harmony. This principle of design is also symbolic of Omani society with its various Islamic traditions and orientations all harmoniously united under one roof. The grounds of the mosque cover an area of 416,000 square meters. The main entrance is approached through three high arches aligned with the lines of dark marble sunken into the pavement which converge on the principle minaret. Its height of 91.5 meters is thus optically accentuated greatly due to the perspective. The entire mosque complex was erected on a rectangular base, at the corners of which are another four minarets, each with a height of 45 meters, completing the enclosure. The wide prayer hall provides prayer space for 6600 believers. The floor is covered with a 4263 square meter carpet, a masterpiece of Persian carpet weaving. The optical counterpart to the fine carpet is the wooden ceiling, which is richly decorated with calligraphy and arabesques. The whole room is dominated by a 34 meter high dome. In its center hangs a magnificent chandelier made of Swarovsky crystal. The Grand Mosque is not only a place for prayers, it is also a center of religious and cultural activities. The government invites many scholars of different faiths to the Grand Mosque, including Christianity and Judaism, to speak on tolerance and interfaith understanding.

Women in Politics

Whatever form of discrimination women may have faced in the past, Omani women today have the force of law protecting their full political rights. Women are as much involved politically in society as men. They have the right to vote and to run for election. Women hold ministerial posts in the Sultanate and have been appointed as ambassadors abroad. Female members of parliament are present in both the Majlis A'Shura (Consultative Council) and the Majlis A'Dawla (State Council). Women hold official positions at all levels, serve in the military, and account for almost half of government employees.

In the private sector one finds women working not only as regular employees

but also in management and executive positions, and as CEOs and owners. No industry is closed to women. Omani law mandates maternity leave and equal pay for equal work.

All present laws and regulations in Oman give equal opportunities to women in trade, labor, civil service and social insurance.

Birth Rites and Rituals

www.islam-in-oman.com

For Omanis the birth of a child is an important social occasion in which the whole family gathers, gifts are made and congratulations are conveyed. It is customary to put money into the swaddling clothes of the newborn. The young mother takes her infant on visits to her parents' house, where everyone gets involved in the happy event.

Some of the rituals surrounding the birth of a child are influenced by religious rites.

Immediately after the birth of the child, chewed dates are rubbed on the baby's gums, the call to prayer is whispered in the right ear, and a prayer for protection against the devil is whispered in the left ear, as instructed by the Prophet.

On the seventh day after birth the baby's head is shaved, the hair is weighed and a donation of silver is made of the equivalent weight. In addition, for a baby boy two animals are slaughtered; for a baby girl, one. On that day the child receives his or her name, and the family gathers for a special meal, the nasika.

A manuscript on the meaning of women's names

It is on this day that Muslim boys should be circumcised. In Oman it is required that circumcision take place in a hospital. Female circumcision is prohibited by law.

Following an old custom in Oman, for each newborn son a date palm is planted. It slowly grows to become the child's personal tree. Because date palms live about as long as people, they can keep their owners from starvation. They are a traditional form of life insurance.

Funeral Customs

www.islam-in-oman.com

The rituals for the burial of the dead are based on religious teachings and may differ slightly depending on the ethnic group and traditional practices. All are agreed, however, that the dignity of the dead must be respected, whether man or woman. The ritual begins with the washing of the body, which is then perfumed and wrapped in a white shroud. The funeral bier is carried on the shoulders to the cemetery where prayers are held. The prayer includes asking for mercy and forgiveness for the departed and imploring for his or her entrance into paradise.

Then the body is carried to the grave, which is a simple pit dug in the appropriate size and depth, into which the body is laid. It is covered with stones so that the funeral bier is not sullied with dust and dirt. Only then is the grave filled with earth.

Usually there is no indication who is buried in a grave, but grave sites may be marked to provide information about the gender of the deceased.

A simple upright stone on either end of the grave marks the final resting place of a man; these plus a third stone in the center indicates that of a woman. On occasion someone may write the name of the deceased on a stone or a small table, which then fades with time.

Religion in Daily Life

www.islam-in-oman.com

Omani Muslims, men and women, start their day with the fajr, the morning prayer, which must be offered before sunrise, either in the mosque or at home. Afterwards they go to work.

During the day the zuhr, or midday prayer, is performed in nearby mosques, or in special prayer rooms in the government and other buildings.

The Quran requires certain prayers to be performed five times per day.

Anyone who is unable to do so at the proscribed prayer times can make up for it at a later time. When traveling, two prayers may be combined.

During the holidays many families travel to Mecca in order to perform the umrah, the "little" pilgrimage.

During the month of Ramadan, Muslims fast from sunrise until sunset. During this time the usual daytime activities take place at night. One meets with neighbors, friends and acquaintances for a large repast, everyone bringing a dish.

On the many small floodlit sports grounds young people may play soccer or volleyball.

Ramadan is the time for communication and socializing. One makes new friends and reconnects with old ones. The focus is not on business and getting ahead, but on one's fellow man.

Eid Days and Alms-giving

www.islam-in-oman.com

Immediately following the fasting month of Ramadan is the feast of Eid al-Fitr, the festival of breaking the fast. It has a high religious and social significance, and is usually celebrated for three days. The children receive gifts from the parents, but not the other way around! It is a huge celebration and everyone wishes one another "Eid mubarak," a blessed fest.

The great Feast of the Sacrifice, Eid al-Adha, takes place on 10th day of Dhu-l-hiddja, the 12th month of the Islamic calendar. It is the traditional time of reflection and hajj, the annual pilgrimage to Mecca which every Muslim should attempt at least once in his life.

During Eid it is expected of everyone to perform the Eid prayers and to offer support to the poor and needy. This kind of voluntary donation (sadaqah) is in addition to the zakat, which is a form of tithing and is obligatory.

The zakat (literally, cleansing) is the duty of every Muslim, but is only collected from those whose wealth is above a certain threshold, and may be up to 2.5 percent of annual income.

This historic form of social welfare is based on the Islamic imperatives of fraternity and mutual support. As a result the wealthy person's possessions are "purified" by the donated portion, which according to interpretations of the Quran does not belong to him anyway. The coordination and allocation of donations is handled by the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs. They also advise whom is to be helped, and how. Often the donations are made of comestibles such as rice, oil, sugar and wheat, which are then delivered in person by the donor directly to the recipient.

The needy may be large families with low incomes, for example, or families who have become impoverished through accident or illness.

Handing Down the Quran

www.islam-in-oman.com

The Quran was revealed to the Prophet Mohammed over the course of 23 years and has since been handed down by succeeding generations of Muslims.

The Quran has remained unchanged since the time of the Prophet: it contains 114 sura of varying length, each containing verses. The total number of verses is 6236.

The Quran contains religious, social and political doctrines, moral teachings and stories of vanished cultures.

Muslims believe that the Quran should be preserved and hallowed, that items which have Quranic inscriptions must be honored, and that each page is to be cherished. If a page ever becomes detached, it is most often rolled up and buried in a dry well, or plugged into cracks in the wall. The Quran is kept in elevated places and is thus protected from desecration and abuse.

Oman's Quranic Manuscripts

www.islam-in-oman.com

Oman has some Quranic manuscripts which were produced by Omani calligraphers. They are characterized by simplicity and clarity. Some manuscripts were written with gold ink and embellished with religious ornaments. Drawings of living creatures, however, do not exist.

Even today valuable Quranic manuscripts are commissioned, even by His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said.

Another such manuscript, referred to as "the Oman Quran," was commissioned by the Ministry of Endowments and Religious Affairs.

www.islam-in-oman.com

The Quran is the sacred book of Muslims. Muslim men, women and children recite it daily in their prayers and other occasions. It is also available on CDs and cassettes in order to listen to the Quran at home, in the car or elsewhere. In Oman there are certain radio stations which broadcast religious programs and recitations of the Quran.

Additionally there are many Quran schools. Here the children learn the individual verses of the Quran by heart, and that the literal meaning should be interpreted based on the present time and place.

Important in the curriculum of Quran schools is to convey the literary qualities of the Arabic language, as well as to promote standards of good behavior and moral values in general. Every year there is a nationwide Quran competition, sponsored by Sultan Qaboos, which enjoys the participation of large numbers of men, women and children.

After a communal banquet it is quite common to silently read excerpts from the Quran, which are usually distributed by a younger member of the family.
